

Right To Play: Promoting Life-skills in Aboriginal Youth (PLAY)

- -RTP began in 2000
- -Canadian programming began in 2010
- -PLAY reaches over 85 Indigenous communities and urban organizations, working with over 5000 youth/year
- -health-based programming is focused on healthy eating, active living and diabetes prevention, all through play-based programming and activities
- -with funding from The Slaight Family Foundation, we are creating new mental health coping skills resources that will be rolled out nationally in the next year
- -we are also working on a new Youth Led Events resource that will be rolled out this summer
