Luke Van Aurich (b. 1990 Perth, Aus) is a photographer, maker and obsessive printer residing in Narm Melbourne. He's a self-taught artist who primarily works with film with the intent to produce printed matter in unconventional forms. Using process in his practice to convey emotion while leaving works untitled (sometimes undated) to allow the viewer to take away what they will.

In his recent solo exhibition, 'Recess' held at RVCA Corner Gallery in Fitzroy, Melbourne. This show included 8 self made, large scale black and white copier prints floated in box frames. 1 of the works was suspended from an artist made steam bent hanger.

Van Aurich sold all the works through a raffle where every dollar collected was donated to Seed Mob, Australia's first Indigenous youth climate justice network with a vision for a just and sustainable future with strong cultures and communities. More here.
