Beth Murphy

Beth Murphy is Director of Films at The GroundTruth Project and founder of Principle Pictures. She directs and produces feature and short documentaries, news packages, digital media and targeted impact campaigns and mentors emerging journalists and filmmakers. Murphy’s work has recently been recognized with Overseas Press Club, RTNDA Edward R. Murrow, and Alfred I. duPont-Columbia University Awards. Her latest feature film “What Tomorrow Brings” tells the story of the first girls’ school in one Afghan village. It became the focus of the GroundTruth interactive “Foreverstan” and the subject of a New York Time’s Op-Doc. An impact campaign Murphy launched with the film succeeded in building a women’s college in the same village as the documentary was shot.
