FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Tribal Diagnostics Takes Start-Up Firm of the Year Award – 2016 REI Native American Business Centers

Catoosa, Oklahoma - Tribal Diagnostics was named the Start-Up Firm of the Year this week at the Oklahoma Minority Enterprise Awards which honors outstanding Native American entrepreneurs in Oklahoma. The awards banquet was held at the Hard Rock Resort Conference Center in Tulsa, August 9th.

Tribal Diagnostics is a high complexity diagnostic lab with an expertise in pain management urine drug testing and will be adding health and wellness blood testing by the end of 2016. The lab is owned and operated by Native Americans whose mission is to help enhance outcomes by providing physicians and patients tailored information to prevent and treat disease.

Cory Littlepage, Tribal Diagnostics CEO, an enrolled member of the Chickasaw Nation, founded Tribal Diagnostics in October 2015. As the CEO he is responsible for strategic growth and operations of the company. He has over 15 years of experience in the healthcare field. Littlepage began his healthcare career at Pfizer. He quickly rose through the ranks of multiple departments. Prior to starting Tribal Diagnostics, he worked for a private equity portfolio company, Expert Global Solutions.

The REI Native American Business Centers Minority Enterprise Awards began in 2009 and evolved through a need to recognize the accomplishments of minority-owned businesses across Oklahoma. The annual event celebrates the contributions made by minority business owners and recognizes advocates throughout Oklahoma.

REI Native American Business Centers deliver technical assistance and training programs in an effort to build successful Native American and minority-owned businesses. Learn more by visiting reinabc.org or tribaldiagnosics.com.
