ONLINE | $40/person suggested donation

In the midst of what the Aetna Insurance Company has called a "loneliness epidemic," which has only been exacerbated by a global pandemic, with political polarization of historic magnitude eroding connections, we could all use a primer on how to build a robust community. That's what the apostle Paul did for a living. His first letter to the Thessalonians is our best window into how that work began. He wrote it almost immediately after he had planted a brand new Christian group, so we can glimpse his secrets to the community very clearly here. Join Dr. Allen Hilton as he offers everyday Christians help with their high-degree-of-difficulty task of being faithful in these atomized American days. For more information on this ONLINE only class, contact fpc@pinnaclepres.org.
