REFUGEES MAKE OKLAHOMA STRONG

Tluang Bawi grew up as a Christian in Myanmar where his family could neither celebrate holidays nor worship without the fear of being killed. Bawi knew that if he stayed in Myanmar, he and his family would likely be killed so they decided to flee, finding themselves on a year-long journey to safety. First, they tried to go to India but were denied entry. They then trekked back across Myanmar to Thailand, followed by Malaysia, where they stayed for nearly five years. Almost six years ago, his family was among the first from Myanmar to be resettled in Oklahoma City. Bawi is now a homeowner and works as an electrician. He helps Catholic Charities of Oklahoma City translate and welcome refugees from Myanmar to his new home.
