THE NAPLA/SAPLA BOOK OF LAW SCHOOL LISTS

INFORMATION ON ABA-APPROVED LAW SCHOOLS

By

Edward M. Stern, Assistant Dean for Pre-Law Advising at Boston University and Gerald L. Wilson, Senior Associate Dean at Duke University
As Editors of this publication, we continue to try to provide to both prelaw advisors and prelaw students the most current and useful information possible. In the spring of this year we conducted our annual survey of ABA accredited law schools in the United States in order to update these lists of law school academic programs, clinical programs, available scholarships, admission policies and other information. Two notes, both caveats, should be added here. First, this is really a reference book, a ready reference, we hope. Individual schools should be contacted for more information. Second, both advisors and students should be cautious when selecting a law school on the basis of one or just a few factors such as specialized programs, joint-degree programs, salary ranges, student organizations, etc. For the most part, a legal education is a general education in law and specialization occurs after law school. Applicants should look at the total program presented by a law school and see which school in its totality seems to best meet their needs.

We hope that users of this book will also recognize that these lists are compiled from information received from law schools and that they are, to coin a phrase, “subject to change without notice.”

A very special thank you is owed to Terry Wilkerson who supervised this project this year. This book could not have been completed without her efforts. The editors are greatly appreciative of her abilities and grace throughout this project.

Please note that NAPLA and SAPLA do not endorse, support or acknowledge the effectiveness or utility of any commercial test preparation or advising program.

Law School Academic Programs

Some law schools offer graduate work in a general field of law while others have graduate programs in a specific area of the law. A number of law schools have joint degree programs whereby a student may combine his/her legal studies with course work in another discipline. In these cases some of the credits from the law courses will count toward the graduate degree in the other discipline while some of the graduate work will fulfill a part of the law degree. When these programs are available the individual will generally be able to complete the two degrees in a year less than if they were taken separately. A large number of law schools give special emphasis to certain areas of the law but not enough work to warrant a graduate program.

The information on the following pages has been compiled over time and is updated annually from the responses to a questionnaire submitted to the law schools by Dean Edward Stern of Boston University and Dr. Gerald Wilson of Duke University. Again thanks are due to Ms. Rita Callahan Ralston, who shepherded this year’s project from beginning to end.

Many schools change their programs from one year to another. After finding the special program in which a student is interested, attention should be given to the website and/or the most recent bulletin of that school. Several schools have indicated that a student might be able to work out another joint degree program on an individual basis.

Two notes may be helpful to the reader:

First, when there is an asterisk (*) beside a school, the information came from the ABA - LSAC Official Guide to ABA-Approved Law Schools rather than from a response to the Wilson/Stern Survey.

Second, when two asterisks () appear beside a school, the entry applies to graduates of foreign law schools only.

C. (i) Law Schools Offering an Accelerated JD/MBA Program or Other Accelerated Program

American University
Dual degree programs, including JD/MA in International Affairs, JD/MPA in Law and Public Administration, JD/MPP in Law and Public Policy, and JD/MS in Justice, Law and Society, take 3.5 to 4 years to complete as a full-time student.

University of Arkansas—Little Rock
Students can complete the joint JD/MBA in three years.

Baylor University

University of California—Los Angeles

Chapman University
Yes, our joint JD/MBA program can be accelerated by taking classes over the summer.

Charleston School of Law
Students may complete a JD/MBA dual degree in 3.5 years.

University of Chicago
Students may complete a JD/MBA joint degree program in 4 years.

Chicago—Kent College of Law
Yes, the accelerated program takes 4 years to complete.

University of Colorado
Students may complete a JD/MBA dual degree program in 4 years.

Columbia University
Columbia Law offers a 3-year JD/MBA program.

Cornell University

University of Dayton
Yes, we offer a 2-year JD.

Drake University
Yes, we offer a 3-year JD/MBA dual degree program.

Duke University
Yes, with careful selection of courses, JD/MBA dual degree students can complete the requirements in seven semesters rather than eight.

Earle Mack School of Law, Drexel University
We offer a 2 year JD.

Florida Coastal School of Law
Florida Coastal School of Law, in collaboration with Jacksonville University, offers a joint JD/MBA which can be completed in three years.

University of Georgia
Students may complete a JD/MBA, JD/MHP in Historic Preservation, JD/MPA in Public Administration, JD/MEd in Sports Studies, or JD/MSW in Social Work in four years.

Georgetown University Law Center
The JD/MBA, JD/MPP, and JD/School of Foreign Service programs provide for accelerated achievement of two degrees in four years instead of the five normally required to complete the degrees separately. JD/Government and JD/Philosophy degrees are also accelerated, with completion depending on whether a student is full-time or part-time and is a Masters or Doctoral candidate. Georgetown also offers three JD/LLM joint degree programs: in International Business & Economic Law, Securities & Financial Regulation, and Taxation. Students who participate in one of these programs and take the requisite number of qualifying courses during their JD studies will be able to complete an LLM degree in only one additional semester.
Golden Gate University

D. AREAS OF EMPHASIS WITHOUT A GRADUATE DEGREE

Advisors and students should note that the primary function of law school curriculum is to offer a general education in law. In most cases, specialization in one area of the law comes with on the job experience after law school. Caution should be exercised in using this list of “Areas of Emphasis” as the primary factor in choosing a law school. Students should also be aware of the possibility that too narrow specialization may limit job opportunities.

Duke Law School
Duke Law School and a consortium of two French universities, l'Universite Paris I Pantheon-Sorbonne and Institut d'Etudes Politiques de Paris (known as “Sciences Po”), offer a dual JD/Master in Global Business Law degree. This dual degree program allows students to receive, after three years of study, both the JD and the Master of Laws degrees. The Master of Laws is a French national law degree that entitles students to sit for the French Bar exam. Students in the JD/Master program spend two years at Duke and a third year studying in Paris.

Georgetown University Law Center
A year-long Master’s program has been created in Paris through a joint effort by two of France’s most highly regarded universities —Institut d'Etudes Politiques de Paris (Sciences Po) and l'Universite Paris I Pantheon-Sorbonne Law School (Sorbonne). In addition to the Master of Laws, a French national law degree, Georgetown students receive a total of 14 Georgetown credits toward their JD degree. This program requires that the students take an additional semester at Georgetown (though without any additional tuition requirement).

Harvard University
University of Cambridge J.D./LL.M.

University of Houston
The UH Law Center and The University of Calgary offer an International Energy Lawyers Program which allows students to earn both American and Canadian law degrees in four years. Students will spend two years at each school and take courses that will enable them to apply for admission to bars in the United States and Canada.

Michigan State University
Dual Degree Program with the University of Ottawa Faculty of Law.

New York University School of Law
New York University School of Law has two dual degree programs where students can earn a JD and the equivalent thereof with schools in other countries—the JD/JD program with Osgoode Hall in Canada, and the JD/LL.B program with the National University of Singapore.

This section of the Book of Law School Lists attempts to give a listing of areas in which clinical programs are offered. Given the great variety of clinical programs and the even greater variety of titles given to these programs, we believe that it is more useful to simply identify areas. Often these clinical programs assume the form of internships or externships. Specific details about each program can be found in individual law school bulletins or in the ABA-LSAC Official Guide to ABA-Approved Law Schools.

Two notes may be helpful to the reader:

First, where there is an asterisk (*) beside a school, the information came from the ABA-LSAC Official Guide to ABA-Approved Law Schools rather than from a response to the Wilson/Stern survey.

Second, the list concludes with a category simply called “Various.” Resisting the temptation to label it “Miscellaneous,” the editors listed schools which indicate that they have clinical programs but did not offer specific information. In many of these cases, clinical programs are arranged individually according to the needs of the student and the opportunities available. Students and advisors should examine information provided individually by these schools.

Pro Bono Work Requirement/Public Service Requirement

Appalachian School of Law: The Externship requirement (three credit hours) allows students to apply the skills learned in the core curriculum. Students typically take this course during the summer following their first year of studies at the Law School. Students work for a total of approximately 225 unpaid hours in a judges’ chambers, public law office, or public interest organization under the direct supervision of a licensed attorney.

Boston University School of Law encourages students to join the Pro Bono Program, which gives students the opportunity to dedicate their developing legal skills to unmet legal needs in the Boston area, throughout the United States and around the world. Through the Pro Bono Program, J.D. student provide 35 hours of law-related service during their three years at BU Law (LL.M. students provide 12 hours) to organizations dedicated to underrepresented groups and or social issues. Upon completion, students receive a notation on their law school transcripts confirming participation in the program.

University of California—Davis
The Pro Bono Program is a certificate program designed to enhance our student’s educational process. Pro bono work is volunteer legal work performed without compensation or academic credit and under the supervision of an attorney. Students can volunteer in public interest organizations, government agencies or courts.

Participation in the program also provides students recognition for their community service; upon completion of 50 or more hours of pro bono work, students receive a Pro Bono Program certificate.

Public Service Law Program
The Public Service Law Program is an academic certification program developed for students seeking public service careers. Students are eligible to enroll at any time throughout law school but are encouraged to enroll in their first year. Certificate requirements include academic and experiential components. To receive a certificate, students must fulfill the academic and experiential components of the Program.

University of California—Irvine
The University of California, Irvine School of Law is deeply committed to the performance of public service work. We expect that our students and faculty will be regularly engaged in public service work throughout their careers.

Public service work, of course, can take many forms and reflect many values, including activities such as helping those who cannot afford legal services and working for public interest and government organizations. We encourage our students and faculty to set yearly public service goals similar to those expected of practicing attorneys.

Catholic University of America
The Columbus School of Law encourages students to engage in pro bono work through the the CUA Law Pro Bono Challenge. CSL students pledge to complete 2550, or 75+ hours of pro bono service during their law school tenure and are recognized accordingly at an annual reception and upon graduation.

Charleston School of Law
Regardless of a student’s path after graduation, part of the Charleston School of Law’s mission is to instill in students the value of public service. Students at the Charleston School of Law are required to perform 30 hours of free legal work in the public interest under the supervision of a licensed attorney before graduation. The school also requires its faculty to provide 30 hours of pro bono work every three years.

University of Colorado
University of Colorado encourages pro bono activities by a voluntary Public Service Pledge program. Students who complete 50 hours of law-related public service work in law school will be recognized at graduation and work will be reflected on transcript.

Columbia University: Every candidate for a J.D. degree must devote 40 hours to public interest field work between the start of the second year of law school and the end of the third year as a prerequisite for graduation. Work will qualify if it is uncompensated (financially or by academic credit), public interest or public service law-related work, broadly defined and regardless of political orientation.

Cornell University
The Public Interest Law Union and the Office of Public Service can help you start building your commitment to pro bono service during law school. The purpose of the Public Service Challenge is to provide school-wide recognition of Cornell Law Students who devote time to public service activities. Students who participate in the Public Service Challenge will receive a Certificate from Dean Stewart Schwab upon each level of completion.

University of Denver
Public Interest
50 hours during law school tenure
University of District of Columbia School of Law

Through Duke University's Pro Bono Project, students provide volunteer legal services in individual areas of interest. While not required, participation is strongly encouraged.

Earle Mack School of Law, Drexel University: Every student must complete at least 50 hours of pro bono service prior to graduation. Students who provide 75+ hours of pro bono service receive recognition at graduation.

Florida State does have a pro bono requirement. Students must fulfill 20 hours of pro bono/public service work during the second or third year of law school.

Georgetown University Law Center encourages students to participate in pro bono activities through the Pro Bono Challenge. Students who perform at least 75 hours of law-related pro bono work during their years at Georgetown are recognized at Graduation.

Georgia State University To encourage and support students who provide pro bono services to the community, the College of Law has adopted the Georgia State University College of Law Pro Bono Recognition Program. Pro bono activities include not only those that ensure adequate legal services for moderate and low income individuals but efforts that enhance the capacity of law and legal institutions to do justice, and activities in the local community that promote justice. The College of Law's pro bono recognition program is designed to encourage students to engage in such activities while in law school and thus conduct themselves in accordance with highest values and standards of the legal profession.

Hamline University School of Law has a pro bono service requirement of 24 hours over the course of law school.

The University of Hawaii | William S. Richardson School of Law has a pro bono/public service requirement that requires all students to perform at least 60 hours of uncompensated public service work.

The Maurice A. Deane School of Law—Hofstra University offers students opportunities to engage in pro bono service on a not-for-credit basis. The Public Service Certificate Program provides students the opportunity to volunteer with nonprofit organizations, governmental agencies and private law firms, or practitioners doing pro bono work. Students who participate receive a certificate from Hofstra Law recognizing their public service. The student-run Unemployment Action Center is a nonprofit corporation that offers free advice and representation to persons denied unemployment benefits.

The Pro Bono Project at Indiana University School of Law—Bloomington is a cooperative program between the Law School and the bar and bench of the surrounding area to provide civil legal assistance to people who could not otherwise afford it. Students are assigned to work closely with volunteer lawyer on a wide variety of matters.

The University of Idaho College of Law is committed to providing opportunities for law students that emphasize the value and habit of service to the community. Accordingly, all students are required to perform 40 hours of uncompensated law-related pro bono service as a condition of graduation. The purpose of this pro bono requirement is to instill in students a commitment to their responsibility as lawyers to give back to the community and promote justice by assisting the underserved and underrepresented. As a result of the program, students gain practical legal experience, clients are served, and legal service providers gain valuable assistance. Students are given the opportunity to fulfill their public service requirements in a wide range of settings, including legal service organizations, government agencies, private firms (pro bono cases), non-profits, and legislative offices.

Indiana University School of Law—Indianapolis encourages pro bono's involvement through a variety of placement opportunities ranging from community based agencies to governmental entities.

Loyola Law School—Los Angeles mandates 40 hours public service work beginning entering class of Fall 94 and thereafter.

The University of Louisville—Brandeis School of Law has a pro bono/public service requirement. After completion of their first year and before their final semester of law school, students must perform a minimum of 30 hours of uncompensated public service work. Institutional support is provided in the form of a half-time director and a half-time assistant who help students in meeting this requirement by having over 300 locations identified as well as assisting students in establishing other locations according to their individual interest.

University of Maine School of Law's faculty has adopted a voluntary student pro bono legal service standard under which every student is encouraged to provide a minimum of 80 hours of pro bono legal service prior to the time of graduation.

"Pro bono legal service" is defined as work involving the provision of legal services that is performed without either financial compensation or academic credit.

Examples include such work for legal services providers, individual lawyers providing pro bono service, social service agencies, low income organizations, civil rights organizations, environmental organizations, consumer organizations, and governmental agencies providing service to individual members of the public who are disadvantaged. Partisan political activity is not included in the definition of "pro bono legal services." Students achieving 80 hours are recognized at graduation.
University of Maryland requires full-time day students to complete a public service requirement by taking one of a number of credit bearing courses in which students have substantial responsibility for providing legal assistance to poor persons or organizations representing the interest of poor persons. These courses:

a) provide students with an experience (including direct professional contact with poor persons) on how the law operates in practice; and

b) include regular classes in which the faculty member provides instruction that, when integrated with the practice experience, will help the students to understand, apply and critique theory and practice; and

c) have a professional responsibility component.

University of Memphis Law School is committed to instill within its students the very heart of the legal profession — providing equal justice under the law. Because equal justice comes at a cost, lawyers have a unique and rewarding obligation to provide pro bono services to those unable to pay. Memphis Law’s Pro Bono Program is designed to nurture this ethical obligation and provide students with the opportunity to gain a practical, hands-on experience while helping improve the lives of the under-represented. Students entering in the fall of 2012 and thereafter are required to complete 40 hours of supervised pro bono work in order to graduate.

University of Michigan Law School asks students to voluntarily commit to performing 50 hours of pro bono service while enrolled at Michigan Law, allowing students to connect their developing knowledge to the world outside the Law School and gaining valuable legal skills while helping an organization in our community meet the needs of underrepresented individuals. Students may choose from Law School-organized projects (ranging from those that provide legal assistance to local residents to projects that spotlight events across the nation and around the globe), or may organize their own projects. Graduating students performing at least 50 hours of pro bono work will receive a Certificate of Pro Bono Service from the Dean, recognition at an annual pro bono banquet, and acknowledgment during the Honors Convocation.

University of Nebraska seeks to encourage and recognize volunteer legal service by second and third year students through the Pro Bono Initiative. Students completing 40 hours or more of approved, qualified pro bono work during their second and/or third years will receive a Dean’s certificate upon graduation.

University of Nevada, Las Vegas—William S. Boyd School of Law requires first-year students to participate in a community service program in which teams of students, working with Legal Aid Center of Southern Nevada prepare and conduct weekly workshops for unrepresented people on basic procedures in family or small claims court and on basic landlord/tenant law and bankruptcy law.

University of North Carolina: The Pro Bono Program tracks the number of hours completed by each law student in order to recognize outstanding pro bono service. Students completing fifty of more hours of pro bono service receive a letter from the Director of the Pro Bono Program and the Dean of the law school acknowledging the contribution they have made to our community. Those who do more than seventy-five hours of pro bono service while a law student are recognized by the North Carolina Bar Association at the public service reception held at the end of each school year in the law school Rotunda. Furthermore, students who complete one hundred or more hours of pro bono service are individually acknowledged at law school graduation. Students completing 50 or more hours during their law school career will receive special notations on their official transcripts..

Northeastern University School of Law At Northeastern University School of Law, we fuse theory and practice with ethical and social justice ideals so students understand what lawyers do, how they should do it, and the difference they can make in the lives of others. Therefore, all students must fulfill a public interest graduation requirement. Under this rule, public interest is defined as employment or service with a government agency; a legal aid, legal services, public defender, victim advocate or similar agency; an organization or attorney advocating law reform or performing pro bono legal representation; or any placement where the dominant characteristic is service to underrepresented groups. Judicial internships are not included in this definition and private firms operated for profit are only included under the 30 hour pro bono option. The requirement may be fulfilled in any of the following ways: completion of a public interest clinical course; completion of a public interest coop; 30 hours of uncompensated legal work in a public interest setting or a public interest pro bono project with a private firm during the second semester of the first year, second and/or third year of law school; or completion of an independent study project of at least 3 credit hours.

Northwestern University. We expect all students to complete at least 40 hours of community service work during their J.D. degrees.

The Nova Southeastern University Law Center Pro Bono Honor Program recognizes students who work pro bono for the public interest while enrolled in law school. Students completing a certain number of service hours will be awarded this graduation honor. The program is part of the Public Interest Law Center, which provides information and resources to students interested in working for the public interest and acknowledges that work. All students maintaining a minimum 2.0 GPA are eligible.

The University of Pennsylvania Law School requires all students entering the J.D. Program to perform 70 hours of unpaid public service work over the course of their J.D. Program through the Toll Public Interest Center.

Roger Williams University School of Law—requires all students to complete 50 hours of law-related public service over the course of their J.D. Program.
Rutgers University School of Law—Newark: The Pro Bono Program places students in a wide variety of public interest or public service law offices where students perform a minimum of 35 hours of service. The program is voluntary. Actually, more than 100 students (about 15% of the student body) participate.

Saint Louis University School of Law does not have a pro bono or public service requirement, however, students are strongly encouraged to participate in pro bono legal service prior to graduation. Pro bono work may be on behalf of a government agency, a non-profit organization or indigent individuals.

University of St. Thomas School of Law (MN): As a requirement for graduation, all students must complete fifty hours of public service during their three years of law school.

St. Thomas University will mandate law students to complete 40 hours of pro bono work as a requirement for graduation. It is designed to give second and third year students legal experience under the supervision of lawyers in a variety of non-profit offices, government agencies, and law firms. This requirement will be effective beginning with the academic year 2000–2001.

Santa Clara University: Students seeking to earn the Public Interest Law Certificate must complete 50 hours of community volunteer work promoting public interest and social justice.

University of South Carolina: Through the University of South Carolina’s Pro Bono Program, students provide volunteer legal services to a variety of projects and areas of interests. Participation is not required, but strongly encouraged and opportunities for service are readily available.

South Texas College of Law: The College’s Pro Bono Honors Program seeks to encourage professionalism both by providing pro bono public service opportunities for students and by recognizing this service through a formal certificate program. Students enrolled in this voluntary certificate program may perform their pro bono work at a pre-approved placement or seek approval for an alternative placement from the program director.

Southern Methodist University requires all students entering the J.D. Program in the Fall of 1993 or thereafter to complete 30 hours of work in approved law-related public service placements.

Stetson University College of Law: As a requirement for graduation, each student must complete 60 hours of public service.

Syracuse University College of Law Recognition for Pro Bono and Community Service: In recognition of the commitment to pro bono and community service work by students of the Syracuse University College of Law, the following recognition program has been created. Students who are in good academic standing and have completed at least 30 hours of pro bono and community service will receive special recognition at graduation. There are two categories of Pro Bono and Community Service Recognition Awards.

Blue Pro Bono Community Service Award: (complete the recommended 30 hours of service) Orange Pro Bono and Community Service Award: (exceed the recommended 30 hours of service by at least 1 full hour)

In addition, the top three graduating students providing the most pro bono and community service hours shall be individually recognized.

Texas Wesleyan School of Law: Each student must perform no less than thirty hours of pro bono work through a placement that has been pre-approved by the School of Law. The pro bono work may be commenced following the completion of the first year of law school, and must be completed prior to graduation. The student is responsible for selecting a placement, contacting that office, arranging to do the work, completing the work, and filling out all proper forms. The work must be law related; clerical work is appropriate only to the extent needed to carry out the overall legal task. The work must be uncompensated; students may not receive monetary compensation, academic credit, or other tangible benefits for performing the service. The work must be supervised by an attorney.

Touro Law Center: As a condition of graduation, every student must satisfy the Public Interest Law Perspective Requirement by successful completion of certain clinical programs or classroom courses or by certification of 40 hours of pro bono work.

Tulane Law School was the first in the country to institute a mandatory pro bono or a community service program. Since 1987, Tulane has required each graduating student to have performed 20 hours of supervised, uncompensated legal work for clients who could not otherwise afford assistance. In 2006 requirement was increased to 30 hours.

Valparaiso University School of Law adopted a pro bono requirement in 1988. Valparaiso law students must perform 40 hours of pro bono work supervised by an attorney. Students must complete the work after completion of 30 credit hours and prior to graduation. If 60 hours or more are completed, it will be noted on the student’s transcript.

University of Washington requires each student to complete 60 hours of public service legal work.
Willamette University College of Law: Willamette’s voluntary pro bono Honors Program enables student to enhance their learning experience by participating in community-based legal service projects. Students gain valuable hands-on involvement in the community by volunteering with a government agency or with a public interest or nonprofit organization. All Willamette law students are eligible to participate and receive pro bono Honors credit.

Western State University College of Law has a voluntary Public Service Program in which students use their legal skills to perform law-related work for the community and the underprivileged and are recognized for that work upon completing 40 hrs. of service.

William Mitchell College of Law: Provides a wide variety of volunteer options through the Minnesota Justice Foundations. Students who serve 50 or more hours through MJF or clinics receive a transcript certification.

Widener University School of Law: Provides a special recognition at graduation for law students who perform a minimum of 60 hours of pro bono work over the course of their J.D. career.

Washburn University School of Law: Some Washburn University School of Law Certificate programs include a public service component.

This section of the Book of Law School Lists contains a summary of specialized law school publications open for student participation. In addition to the scholarly specialized publications listed in the next few pages, many law schools publish newspapers, newsletters and yearbooks. In most cases these are entirely student run.

Further information about these publications can be obtained by examining the individual school’s website and/or the school's most recent bulletin or by consulting the ABA · LSAC Official Guide to ABA-Approved Law Schools. Where designated by an asterisk (*), the information came from the Official Guide rather than a response to the Wilson/Stern survey.

3. Angela D. Dales Merit Scholarship Program for first-year students:
   - Merit Scholarships are awarded in the form of a credit against the tuition charged to the student who receives the award.
   - Eligibility for an award during the student’s first year of Law School is determined based on the student’s Law School Admissions Test (LSAT) score and undergraduate grade point average (UGPA) as determined by LSAC. Eligibility for retention of an award during the student’s second and third years is determined based on the student’s academic performance during Law School.
   - The Law School is able to award only a limited number of these scholarships, and scholarships will be awarded on a first-come, first-served basis. Applicants therefore are encouraged to complete their Law School application at the earliest possible date. An award is not finalized until the applicant has been accepted to the Law School and has paid his or her seat deposit.
   - Transfer students are not eligible for Merit Scholarships.

Temple University Beasley School of Law

1. Non-need Based Scholarships for Entering Students:
   Temple awards a number of scholarships based on merit, need and a combination of both, so it is difficult to separate the factors which go into the selection process and to provide specific information on the number of awards made in a specific academic year.

   Incoming students are eligible for a number of merit and need scholarships ranging from partial to full-time tuition. The faculty Admissions Committee makes recommendations for merit scholarship awards and students are not required to submit a separate application. The one exception is the Rubin-Public Interest Scholars Program which provides full and half tuition scholarships to students who will be pursuing a public interest legal career.

   Using division students are considered for numerous scholarships based on a variety of factors including academic performance, financial need and contributions to the law community.

B. SCHOOLS OFFERING A SUMMER CONDITIONAL ADMISSION PROGRAM

Only those schools responding to the Wilson/Stern Survey are included.

Appalachian School of Law
The Pre-Admission Summer Opportunity (PASO) program is for students who may have the potential to succeed as law students and lawyers, but whose skills and talents may not be reflected fully by the traditional measures of the LSAT and undergraduate performance. PASO is a program that provides participants an opportunity to experience law school course work and an opportunity for the faculty to evaluate the students’ performance to assess the ability to succeed in law school. PASO participants who successfully complete the program may be offered admission to the entering class in August of the year in which they complete the program or in the following year’s entering class, depending upon availability factors.

University of Baltimore
A 4 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take one class that interweaves substantive issues with a writing component. Students do not receive credit for the class. Between 30 and 40 students participate based on perceived likelihood of success. Students admitted generally have lower than desired LSAT scores or GPA, but have either outstanding issues in their record or are minority applicants with strong GPAs. There is no special application procedure however, the applicant may request to be placed in the program. In order to matriculate in the fall, students must have a 70 average at the end of the program. The program incurs no cost to the student. The contact person for the program is Professor John Lynch, jlynch@ubalt.edu.

Campbell Law School
Approximately 50–75 students are given the opportunity to participate in our seven week performance-based admission program (P BAP). The students take two courses of three credit hours each. A final exam is given in each course. A student who receives a “B” in both courses is automatically admitted to the fall program. Students who do not meet this criteria, but who demonstrate potential for success in law school, will be placed on a waiting list for the fall program.

University of Detroit Mercy
An 8 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take two classes, Legal Writing and Criminal Law. Students do not receive credit for the classes. Approximately 20 students generally participate. The Special Summer Program (SSP) is operated for minority, disadvantaged, or disabled applicants who do not meet the minimum standards of the entering class, but show potential for the study of law. SSP applicants must have at least one LSAT score in the 15th percentile. Question 13 of the application asks the applicant if he/she would like to be considered for the SSP. In a separate statement, applicants must describe the circumstances that qualify him/her for the SSP. In case of a disability, the applicant is requested to provide documentation. To be eligible for matriculation in the fall, students of the program must pass the substantive criminal law course, pass the legal research and writing course, and receive the unanimous evaluation of the SSP faculty. The cost of the program is $500 for tuition and $18 for parking. The contact person for the program is Kimberly Jones, Director of Recruitment, Admission and Student Affairs, joneski@udmercy.edu.
University of the District of Columbia

A 4 week summer conditional admission program. Required classes are Legal Writing, Reasoning and Analysis (class and tutorials); Torts and Criminal Law or Contracts. Students do not receive credit for the summer classes. Approximately 8 to 16 students participate. Criteria for admission into the program varies, usually the LSAT and/or GPA are below the “accepted” numerical standards or the student's writing or organizational skills may be of concern and below what is deemed acceptable. There is no special application procedure. The student must attend every class and complete every assignment and exam in order to meet the condition of his or her admission into the fall class. At the end of the program each student is provided with an evaluation of his or her performance in the program; they are also counseled about their progress and about areas in which they may need to improve. If appropriate the program director recommends that students participate in the Academic Support Program. There is no cost to the student for participating in the program. The contact person for the program is Professor Derek Alphran, Director of the Summer Mason Enhancement Program for Academic Success (MEPAS); he can be reached at dalphran@udc.edu.

Florida Coastal School of Law

The Alternative Admission Model Program for Legal Education (AAMPLE®) is a performance-based admissions program that rewards students who demonstrate the desire, commitment, and level of achievement necessary to manage the rigors of law school. Students are required to take two law school courses selected from our regular law school curriculum and modified to provide the most accurate indication of a student's potential for law school success. Students may choose to take the courses on-campus or online. Within each course, students will take two quizzes and a final exam. Students who successfully pass each course with a 2.5 G.P.A. or higher are automatically accepted into the school's Juris Doctor program. Florida Coastal offers the AAMPLE program twice a year- once in the summer for admission to our fall class and once in the fall for admission to our spring class. For more information, please contact Nicole Schumer, Assistant Director of Admissions, at nschumer@fcsl.edu.

Indiana University School of Law—Indianapolis

An 8 week summer program that selected students must participate in as a condition of admission. Continuation in the fall is not conditioned on their performance in the summer program. Students are required to take one course, a Legal Methods class with an emphasis on Legal Writing, for which they will receive 2 credits. Between 25–35 students generally participate in the program. Selection for the program is based on a variety of factors, for example unparallel indicators, out of school for a number of years, English as a second language, or heavy science or math background with little writing. Applicants who wish to be considered for this program need to apply by February 1st instead of the normal deadline, March 1st. The program costs the rate of two credit hours, and typically nonresidents receive a scholarship. For more information contact the Office of Admissions.

Louisiana State University

Legal Methods course, successful completion, admission for Fall. Must have approval of Faculty Committee to enter summer program.

University of Louisville—Brandeis School of Law

Approximately 25 applicants are given the opportunity to participate in a six-week course (Monday through Thursday evenings) designed to enhance their skills in order to improve their chances for success in law school. All who complete the work in a satisfactory (effort and performance are evaluated) manner are allowed to enter law school in the fall. Most, if not all, of the participants successfully matriculate each fall.
Loyola—New Orleans

University of Memphis

University of Memphis School of Law operates the Tennessee Institute for Pre-Law (TIP) program. The TIP program is for Tennessee residents (and Border County residents) who are not admitted through the regular admissions process, but who show potential for the study of law and bring diversity to the class. Applicants who are admitted into TIP and successfully complete the summer program will be eligible for admission in the fall semester to the University of Memphis School of Law. The TIP portion of the application requests information on whether a student is a first-generation college graduate, foreign-born, or a first-generation U.S. citizen; whether a student is a graduate of a historically minority undergraduate institution; whether a student has a disability; or whether a student is or was economically disadvantaged. The required TIP supplemental statement asks the student to describe the circumstances that qualify the student for participation in the program and the way in which the student might contribute to diversity in the law school.

Michigan State University

University of New Mexico

North Carolina Central University School of Law

Nova Southeastern University

We offer a program of approximately 20–25 students who participate in a 6-week course. Performance in the course determines whether a student is offered admission.

Yes, special attention to nonquantifiable factors in addition to LSAT and GPA. Successful completion allows students to continue into first year.

Students selected to participate in the Performance–Based Admission Program (PBAP) spend two weeks in a classroom setting where they are given instruction in one substantive law course by experienced faculty members. Additionally, students learn basic skills: how to prepare for class; how to organize and outline course material; and how to answer legal questions. Applicants are evaluated through diagnostic testing, oral and written assignments and interviews. These evaluations determine whether the PBAP applicant will be admitted to the School of Law in the fall.

A 6 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take two classes, Criminal Procedure and Negotiable Instruments. Students do not receive credit for the classes. Approximately 150 students participate, subject to change yearly. The admissions committee invites selected students to participate in the program. There is no special application procedure. In order for the student to matriculate into law school in the fall, the criteria is no grade below a C in either class and a GPA of 2.5. This year the program cost was $3500, this is also subject to change. The contact person for the program is Beth Hall, Assistant Dean for Admissions, hallb@nsu.law.nova.edu (954)262-6117
University of Oklahoma

The Admission/Early Arrival Program (EAP) is a summer arrival program beginning at the end of May and including in mid-July. The focus in EAP is on admitted students a first look at law school and building the confidence and skills necessary to succeed in law school. The class size is limited to approximately 20 students. Interested applicants must apply for both EAP and fall admission on the application. The committee uses a number of factors to evaluate candidates who have applied for EAP admission. One factor is a disparate GPA and LSAT score. A prospective student with a relatively low GPA but with a very competitive LSAT score may possess the ability to succeed in law school and might be an ideal applicant for EAP. In the alternative, a prospective student who does not test well on standardized exams but has demonstrated success in the classroom through a competitive GPA may also be a good fit for EAP. Finally, a prospective student who may have been out of the classroom environment for a number of years and who needs additional transition time might apply for the EAP. The program is designed to build the confidence and skills necessary to succeed in law school. The EAP students take tough courses from some of our very best professors. The program is not provisional in any way; students admitted through EAP automatically matriculate in the fall with the other first year students. EAP students simply arrive earlier than the rest of the class and earn law school credits during the summer. Prospective students interested in the EAP program should write a brief statement detailing why they should be considered for EAP. The deadline for EAP applications is March 15. For more information on EAP or application strategy please do not hesitate to email Susan Wilson, Recruitment Specialist at susanwilson@ou.edu. Susan works with applicants on an individual basis to answer questions about the law school admission process, OU Law’s admission process, and law school in general.

Oklahoma City University

Two pass/fail courses.

Saint John’s University

A 6 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take one class which varies from summer to summer. The class is always a first-year required course, last year it was Property, the year before it was Contracts. Students receive credit for the class, if they successfully complete the program by earning a B minus or better. Approximately 30 students participate each summer. Applicants need to request consideration for the Summer Institute no later than March 30th. Alternatively, an applicant may be invited to the program if their application is not otherwise admissible. In order to matriculate in the fall, students must earn a B minus or better in the course. The student pays only the cost of books. There is a required $750 deposit (the same as for all admits). If the student successfully completes the program this deposit is credited towards tuition, if not, the $750 is refunded to them. For more information contact either Robert M. Harrison, Assistant Dean for Admissions, harrison@stjohns.edu, or Theresa McNemey, mcnernt1@stjohns.edu.

Saint Louis University

The Summer Institute at Saint Louis University is designed to identify students who have experienced the effects of educational disadvantage. The Institute includes a substantive first semester course and a course in legal skills. The program lasts seven weeks, beginning in late May/early June and ending in mid-July. Students who successfully complete this program are accepted into the School of Law for the Fall semester. Limited to 25 students. Tuition and books are free.

St. Mary’s University

A 5 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take two classes, Logic & Writing and Analytical Skills. Between 15-20 students participate in the program. They are recommended by the Admissions Committee from the general applicant pool, and selected by the Program Director. There is no special application procedure. In order to matriculate into law school in the fall, the student must be recommended for admission by the professors conducting the summer program after completion. The cost of the program is $1500. The contact person is Professor John Teeter, jteeter@stmarytx.edu.
Seattle University School of Law

7 week required attendance in the Alternative Admission Program. All students are considered full members of the entering class and guaranteed admission in fall.

University of South Dakota

A 6 week screening program which will yield 10 admits. Between 30–50 students participate in the program. Students are required to take two classes, Agency and Personal Property. Students are selected based on a completed file that is eligible to begin law school that fall; usually the only concern is in the numbers, either a low LSAT and/or GPA. Applicants cannot apply for the program; they are invited to participate after review of the law school application and supporting material. During the final week of the program, participants take an exam in each course, anonymously. The two exam scores are averaged, and those who have a minimum grade of 70 (mid-C) on EACH exam, AND whose scores rank in the top ten of the program are offered admission. The cost of the program is $1,000 plus books, and room & board. The contact person for the program is Jean Henriques, Admissions Officer, jhenriqu@usd.edu.

Syracuse University

A 3 week, summer program called Leo Education Opportunity Program (LEO) that is not a conditional admission program, but a program that provides an opportunity for students who may not have otherwise been offered admission. Students are required to take three classes, Introduction to Law and the Legal System, Legal Writing Workshop, and Legal Skills. Students do not receive credit for the classes. Between 20–30 students usually participate in the LEO program. Recognizing that numerical indicators are not always the best predictors of success in law school— even when considered in combination with other factors—the College of Law admits a limited number of students each year through the LEO program. There is no special application procedure. Students do not need to achieve set grades during this program, but need to successfully complete the program requirements and take an exam at the end of the three weeks. Tuition costs are covered for all LEO participants during the summer program. For more information, contact either Nikki Laubenstein, Director of Admissions, aslauben@law.syr.edu, or Melanie Rodriguez, Assoc. Director of Student Life, mcrdrodruez@law.syr.edu

Texas Southern University

Special attention to non-quantifiable factors in addition to LSAT and GPA. Successful completion allows students to continue into first year.

Texas Tech University

A 4 week summer conditional admission program. Required courses change from year to year. Students receive credit for the summer classes. Approximately 20-25 students participate in the program. The Admissions Committee decides which students will be considered for this program and those that will be accepted for the program. It is designed for those with lower academic indicators, but additional information in the file indicates the ability to succeed in law school. There is no special application procedure. If accepted for the summer program, they must attend the summer program to proceed to the fall. There is no required grade point average from the summer to proceed to the fall. The current tuition rate is $334 for Texas residents and $580 for non-residents. Students will pay the current tuition rate and all tuition generated fees. Since these rates change from year to year, the applicant should check the university website for current information. The contact person for the program is Terence L. Cook, Assistant Dean for Admissions and Recruitment, terence.cook@ttu.edu.

Texas Wesleyan School of Law

The Pre-Admission Legal Studies (PALS) program is a School of Law conditional admit program requiring a B- or better performance. Students are invited into the program via the admissions process.
The Professional Exploration Program (PEP) is a 5–8 day intensive program. This program is designed to give law school applicants who do not meet the minimum admissions requirements a chance to qualify for alternative admission. It also provides law school applicants the opportunity for self-exploration and discovery of strengths and weaknesses in their pursuit of a career. At the completion of the program, the students’ performance is evaluated by the PEP Committee. Students are notified by letter, three weeks after the program, as to the committee’s decision whether they’ve been offered admission to Thomas M. Cooley Law School.

A 6 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take three classes. Students do not receive credit for the classes. Student participation varies from year to year. Criteria for admission is based on applicants who have displayed promise of success in legal studies even though they may have excelled in only one of the two principal standardized predictors of success—the Law School Admission Test and the undergraduate grade point average. The personal statement, letters of recommendation and all materials submitted in support of the application are considered. There is no special application procedure. Participants who obtain a 2.3 cumulative grade point average in the program are offered admission to the fall class. The cost of the program is $1750. The contact person for the program is Barbara Ayars, Assistant Dean for Admissions, blayars@mail.widener.edu, (302) 477-2162.

E. SCHOOLS PERMITTING PRE-SELECTION OF STUDENTS TO BE INTERVIEWED BY FIRMS

Schools listed below unless otherwise noted, permit firms interviewing on campus to pre-select 100% of the candidates they will interview. Only schools responding to the Wilson/Stern survey were included.

University of Alabama
All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers pre-select candidates.

Albany Law School
On campus interviews are scheduled based on 100% employer prescreening.

American University

University of Arizona
All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers are permitted to pre-select 100%.

Arizona State University College of Law
May pre-select 100%.

University of Arkansas—Little Rock

Atlanta’s John Marshall Law School

Baylor University

Boston College Law School
While employers may pre-select all candidates, they are strongly encouraged to participate in an interview lottery system to ensure that all interested students have a broad range of interviewing opportunities. Over 90% of employers participate in our lottery system.

Boston University School of Law
All employers are required to allot 30% of their interview schedule to lottery candidates with exceptions for intellectual property employers or employers requiring a specific undergraduate background.

Brooklyn Law School
All students are permitted to submit for all employers. While employers are permitted to pre-select 100% of the candidates, they are strongly encouraged to reserve interview slots for students ranked below their stated criteria so that a larger number of interested students have interviewing opportunities.

University of California—Davis

California Western University

Capital University

Benjamin N. Cardozo (Yeshiva)
A portion of students (approximately 15%) are selected by lottery.

Case Western Reserve University
All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers are permitted to pre-select 100%.

Catholic University of American
All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers are permitted to pre-select 100% of candidates whom they will interview.

Charleston School of Law
Additional Useful Information

Chicago—Kent Law School

No, pre-select 80% other 20% filled by lottery.

University of Cincinnati

All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers are permitted to pre-select 100%.

University of Colorado

Employers may pre-select but are encouraged to see all interested.

University of Connecticut

Permit pre-selection of students to be interviewed by firms.

Creighton University

Employers may pre-select but are encouraged to see all interested candidates.

University of Denver

Permit pre-selection of students to be interviewed by firms. Pre-select 90%; other 10% by lottery.

DePaul University College of Law

Drake University does not permit firms to preselect 100% of the interview candidates unless this is the only way a firm will come. If this is the case, we allow them to do it, with notice to the students.

Duke University

Students rank the firms they are interested in interviewing with and the Office of Career and Professional Development arranges a schedule that accommodates as many of those requests as possible. Firms do not pre-select the students they interview with.

Duquesne University

Interviewed by firms. Employers are asked to select 75% of the interviews, 25% are selected through the lottery system.

Emory University

Florida Coastal School of Law

All students are permitted to submit for all employers. FCSL does permit pre-selection of students to be interviewed by firms based on criteria by the employer.

Florida State University

University of Florida

Employers may pre-select candidates. Criteria include experience, extra curricular activities, grades, evidence of research and writing skills, and ties to geographic region.

George Mason University

School permitting pre-selection of students to be interviewed by firms.

Georgia State University

Employers may pre-select but are encouraged to see all interested candidates.

University of Georgia

All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers are permitted to pre-select 100%.

Gonzaga University

Employers may pre-select but are encouraged to see all interested candidates.

Hamline University School of Law

All resumes are sent to employers, although they may pre-select.

Maurice A. Deane School of Law—Hofstra University

University of Houston Law Center

All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers are permitted to pre-select 100% of candidates.
Employers are encouraged to see all interested candidates, but may pre-select as they choose.

All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers preselect 90% of their candidates; 10% are selected by lottery.

Employers have the option to pre-screen resumes. However, approximately 15% of employers coming on campus choose instead to see all interested candidates.

Employers may pre-select 100%, but are encouraged to consider factors other than strict academic performance. Several employers try to interview all who submit resumes.

We permit 100% pre-selection of students to be interviewed by employers.

Permits employers to pre-select 100% of the students that the firm chooses to interview. They are encouraged to see all interested candidates.

Employers may pre-select 100%.

Fall semester: 80% pre-select, 20% by lottery. Spring semester: 80% pre-select, 20% by lottery.

Permit pre-selection of students to be interviewed by firms.

Permit pre-selection of students to be interviewed by firms.

Employers may pre-select 100% of students to be interviewed.

All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers pre-select all candidates.

Yes. Any student who meets an employer’s predetermined criteria is permitted to apply for an interview.

Employers may pre-select.

Employers may pre-select but are encouraged to see all interested candidates.

All students are permitted to submit resumes for employer consideration. Because Northeastern does not have a class rank, employers look at many factors, such as narrative course evaluations by faculty and co-op evaluations by employers in determining which students to interview.

H. WHAT SCHOOLS DO WITH MULTIPLE LSAT SCORES

Only those schools responding to the Wilson/Stern Survey are included.

University of Akron
If an applicant has multiple LSAT scores, we will consider the highest score.

University of Alabama
Highest score considered.

Albany Law School
Highest score considered.

American University
Admission Committee reviews all scores, but typically considers higher score for admission purposes.

*Appalachian School of Law
Highest score considered.

University of Arizona
Most scores are averaged unless they are 10 points or more apart. If they are, we use the higher score.

Arizona State University College of Law
The highest score is used in all reporting and given more significant consideration. Admissions committee sees and reviews all scores.

University of Arkansas—Fayetteville
We take the highest of the final three scores.

Atlanta’s John Marshall Law School
The Admissions Committee will see all reported scores and give substantial weight to the highest score.

Baylor University
Highest score considered.

Boston College Law School
Adheres to the ABA policy of reporting the higher LSAT score, but considers all scores in the file review process. The admissions committee will consider addenda explaining differences in scores.

Boston University School of Law
Highest score considered.

University of Baltimore
If more than 7 points apart and GPA is 3.0 plus, take highest.

Brooklyn Law School
The Committee on Admissions sees all reported scores and give substantial weight to the highest score.

University of California—Berkeley
Take highest score.

University of California—Davis
In keeping with past practice, consideration will be given to all LSAT scores. Applicants are asked to provide additional information when there is a score difference of 5 points or higher. The highest score will be the score of record.

University of California—Hastings College of the Law
Highest score used.

University of California—Irvine
The admission committee will see all reported but will count the highest as the official score.

University of California—Los Angeles
Highest score with discretion of considering all.

California Western University
Most recent if highest, otherwise averaged.

Campbell University
We generally use the highest score; however, we do consider each individual score and any explanation offered for the lower score.

Capital University
Will consider highest score; generally, for three or more scores, the average is used. Explanations for differences welcome.

Benjamin N. Cardozo (Yeshiva)
Review all scores, may give highest consideration to high LSAT.
Case Western Reserve University  Consider highest score, but all scores reviewed.

Catholic University of America  Consider highest score, but all scores reviewed.

Chapman University School of Law  The ABA has changed the rule regarding the reporting of the highest of multiple LSAT scores, however, this does not change the review process. If the candidate has taken the LSAT multiple times, the Committee will review the LSAT scores. From an admissions perspective, the average score may be the best indication of an applicant’s success. It is advisable for the applicant to explain why one score is more indicative of his or her likelihood of success. For merit scholarship purpose, we will utilize the high LSAT SCORE.

Charleston School of Law  Highest score considered.

University of Chicago  We review all scores, however for reporting purposes we use high LSAT.

Chicago-Kent College of Law  If the LSAT is taken more than once, the Admissions Committee may consider the average score, the more recent score or the higher score, depending on individual circumstances. Preference is typically given to the highest score earned.

University of Cincinnati  Use highest score.

City University of New York (CUNY) School of Law  Consider all scores, with some weight being given to highest.

University of Colorado  Consider and review all scores, but high LSAT score is used when reporting.

Columbia University  The Committee considers the entire LSAT testing history when evaluating applications for admission.

University of Connecticut  All scores are considered however, the high LSAT score is used when reporting.

Cornell University  Consider highest score, but all scores reviewed. Explanations for differences are suggested.

Creighton University  Unless there is reason to discount one.

University of Dayton  Generally accept highest, although all scores are considered.

University of Denver  Generally accept highest, although all scores are considered.

DePaul University College of Law  We will consider the high score.

University of Detroit Mercy  We review all scores.

University of the District of Columbia School of Law  Consider highest score, but all scores are reviewed.

Drake University  Consider highest score, but all scores reviewed.

Duke University  Will consider higher score or average, depending on circumstances and the overall context of the application. An addendum is suggested when there is a significant difference between test scores.

Duquesne University  First two scores not averaged.

Earle Mack School of Law, Drexel University  The highest score is used.

Emory University  The law school admission committee will consider all reportable LSAT scores. The admission committee will use the LSAT score that in their estimation best represents an applicant's academic ability.
| University of Florida               | Review all scores. Candidates should discuss score differences. |
| Florida Coastal School of Law      | Florida Coastal School of Law uses the highest score.           |
| Florida State University           | Average. Consider all scores within 5 years.                   |
| Fordham University                 | Consider all scores, but report the high as per ABA instructions. |
| George Mason University            | We utilize the high LSAT.                                     |
| George Washington University       | We use the high LSAT.                                         |
| Georgetown University Law Center   | For reporting purposes, Georgetown Law adheres to the ABA policy of reporting the higher LSAT score. For evaluation purposes, the Georgetown Admissions Committee typically averages LSAT scores. Georgetown may consider the higher LSAT score if you have only taken the LSAT twice. Please address any mitigating circumstances you feel the Admissions Committee should consider. |
| University of Georgia              | Admission Committee reviews all scores, but typically considers higher score for admission purposes. |
| Georgia State University           | Admissions Committee reviews all scores, but typically considers higher score for admission purposes. |
| Golden Gate University             | We utilize high LSAT.                                         |
| Gonzaga University                 | We utilize the high LSAT.                                     |
| Hamline University School of Law   | All scores considered significant weight to highest.           |
| Harvard Law School                 | All scores and the average will be considered.                |
| University of Hawaii | William S. Richardson School of Law | We take the higher score. |
| Maurice A. Deane School of Law — Hofstra University | The Admissions Committee will review all reported scores and give substantial weight to the highest score. |
| University of Houston Law Center   | Primary consideration given to the highest score.             |
| University of Idaho                | More weight placed on higher score.                           |
| University of Illinois             | Take the highest score.                                       |
| Indiana University School of Law— Bloomington | Scores are generally averaged. Consideration is given to large differential in scores. |
| Indiana University School of Law— Indianapolis | Take the highest score.                                      |
| University of Iowa                 | We use the higher score.                                      |
| The John Marshall Law School       | We tend to use the highest score.                             |
| University of Kansas               | Consider all scores, but give the most weight to the highest score. |
| University of Kentucky             | Multiple scores are averaged in almost all cases.             |
| Lewis & Clark Law School           | Use the highest score, but all scores are seen.               |
University of Louisville—Brandeis School of Law
Emphasize the most recent score in our evaluation process.
Appreciate explanations for multiple takings.

Loyola Law School—Los Angeles
The average score is used unless the applicant has submitted an explanation for the lower score.

Loyola University—Chicago
Higher of 2 scores, if highest is most recent.

University of Maine School of Law
Averages scores, significant increase noted.

University of Maryland
Use the higher score.

Marquette University
In the case of an applicant with more than one LSAT score, the Admissions Committee will receive a test score report for the applicant that discloses all LSAT scores and the average of those scores. The Admissions Committee may give the highest score priority on a case-by-case basis, especially if the applicant can provide compelling, convincing evidence in a brief written addendum explaining why a lower LSAT score should be considered aberrant.

Mercer University
All scores reviewed, highest LSAT reported to ABA.

University of Memphis
Use highest for multiple takings.

University of Miami
Highest LSAT given the greater weight.

University of Michigan
Report highest score, but consideration given to each score and to average.

Michigan State University
Only the highest is considered.

Mississippi College School of Law
Use highest score but review the range of scores.

University of Mississippi
Admissions decisions are based upon the highest LSAT score.

University of Missouri—Columbia
If two LSAT scores, the highest score is considered. If more than two LSAT scores, the scores are averaged.

University of Missouri—Kansas City
Use the higher score, although all scores are considered before making an admission decision.

University of Montana
Scores are averaged for the prediction index but all scores are taken into consideration.

University of Nebraska
Average multiple LSAT scores. Admission Committee reviews all scores.

University of Nevada—Las Vegas
Highest LSAT given the greater weight.

New England Law | Boston
Use the highest score, although all scores are taken into consideration.

University of New Hampshire School of Law
Review all; report highest score.

New York Law School
The entire application is reviewed, including all LSAT scores. In the unusual circumstance of a significant difference between scores, additional weight is given to the higher score when the candidate is able to provide us with reasons for that difference.

New York University
The Committee on Admissions evaluates LSAT scores based on the average score in most cases. The Committee may take special circumstances into account. If a candidate can point out specific reasons why the Committee should consider an LSAT score aberrant, they should detail those reasons in an addendum to the personal statement.
University of North Carolina

We use the higher of two scores. With more than two scores, we decide on a case by case basis between average or highest.

North Carolina Central University

Average multiple LSAT scores.

Northern Kentucky University

Will strongly consider the highest. Explanation of multiple scores encouraged.

Northeastern University School of Law

We use the highest LSAT score.

Northern Illinois University

Average multiple scores (but the admissions committee sees the separate scores)

Northwestern University

Takes the highest.

University of Notre Dame Law School

Review all scores; consider the highest.

Nova Southeastern University

We take the highest LSAT score.

Ohio Northern University

Take highest LSAT score.

Ohio State

We average.

Oklahoma City University

We use highest LSAT only.

University of Oklahoma

Highest LSAT score

University of Oregon

Consider all scores, but we report the highest score to the ABA.

Pace University

Take the highest LSAT score.

University of the Pacific, McGeorge School of Law

Use the highest score posted within a five year period.

Penn State Dickinson School of Law

Average scores. We do, however, look at all scores and will consider special circumstances offered in explanation for a low score.

University of Pennsylvania

If you take the LSAT more than once, all scores and their average will be considered. If there are circumstances that you believe affected your performance on a prior test, we encourage you to provide an additional statement with your application explaining those circumstances. The Admissions Committee will consider such information and may, at its discretion, evaluate your application based on the higher or highest LSAT score.

University of Pittsburgh

We use the highest LSAT score.

University of Puerto Rico

Take the highest score as a general rule. However, spread of scores is considered.

Quinnipiac University

We take the highest LSAT score.

Regent University School of Law

Review all test scores, the highest score is heavily weighted.

University of Richmond

We take the highest LSAT score, but all scores are reviewed and explanations for significant differences in scores are encouraged.

Roger Williams University School of Law

We take the highest score.

Rutgers University—Newark

Average multiple scores unless 10 point difference then take higher, or if written explanation, take higher.

Samford University—Cumberland

Take highest score.

</table>
Consider only the highest score in our admission formula. Score must be within 5 years of application date.

University of Toledo
Highest score only.

Touro Law Center—Jacob D. Fuchsberg
Touro Law takes the higher/highest score (provide contextual information/addendum if there is a dramatic difference in scores).

Tulane University
Tulane looks at all scores, but relies on the applicant to explain why a higher score should be given more weight.

University of Tulsa
We average, unless compelling reasons given for not averaging or if score increases 20% points.

University of Utah
We will presumptively use the highest score. The reviewer, however, may use the average score if information in the file indicate that the score is the most appropriate measure of the candidates skills.

Valparaiso University
Highest score.

Vanderbilt Law School
Readers consider all scores and their average.

Vermont Law School
Take highest score.

Villanova University
The Admissions Committee will consider the high LSAT score, although all LSAT scores are reviewed and applicants should provide a written explanation if there is a significant difference between one or more LSAT scores.

University of Virginia
Highest score.

Wake Forest University
We average if test taken more than twice.

Washburn University School of Law
Highest score.

University of Washington
Take the average of multiple LSAT scores.

Washington and Lee University
Will consider explanation for widely disparate scores

Washington University
For admittance and scholarship purposes, students are evaluated based on their highest LSAT score. However, all scores are reviewed so vast discrepancies should be explained.

Western New England College
We take the high score.

Western State University
We will review all scores but give consideration to the highest score.

Widener University School of Law
We review all scores, however, for reporting purposes we use high LSAT.

Willamette University
Take highest score as a general rule; however, spread of scores is considered.

William & Mary
Consideration is given to individual scores and related circumstances. Reports are prepared using direction provided. (Example: Since the ABA uses the highest LSAT, accordingly so does William & Mary Law School.)

William Mitchell College of Law
Review all scores but give consideration to the highest.

University of Wisconsin
We take the highest LSAT score. If there is a significant discrepancy and a written explanation is provided, we will take all factors into consideration.

University of Wyoming
University of Wyoming takes the highest of multiple LSAT scores.

Yale Law School
Review all score information available. We do not average or take the high score
I. HOW SCHOOLS TREAT OLD LSAT SCORES

J. PREFERRED MEANS OF RECEIVING LETTERS OF RECOMMENDATION

Each law school was asked to indicate its preferred means of receiving letters of recommendation. The four options listed below were offered. The list indicates preferences of schools responding.

(1) We accept those letters of recommendation which have been processed through the Law Services Letters of Recommendation Services.
(2) We prefer that students use the Law Services Letter of Recommendation Services but do accept letters directly from the recommender or the undergraduate institutions’ credential service.
(3) We prefer letters which come directly from the recommender or the undergraduate institution’s credential service but do accept letters from the Law Service Letter of Recommendation Service.
(4) We have no preference.

L. SCHOOLS USING A FORMULA IN THE ADMISSIONS PROCESS

Only those schools responding to the Wilson/Stern Survey are included. These schools indicated that a formula is used for pre-sorting and as an aid in determining the process for considering the file but not for determining the decision.

The specific formula used by a law school is provided in cases where that information is available.

<td>No goals or quotas are set, but an applicant’s potential contribution to diversity is another consideration in determining which applicant’s are selected for admission. This latter criterion necessarily involves an assessment of such factors as geographic origin; membership in a disadvantaged economic, racial or ethnic group; personal interest and talents; special achievements; prior life experience; leadership qualities; and maturity. These elements reflect the Law School’s concern that every applicant, regardless of age, sex, disability, race, color, religion, national or ethnic origin, sexual orientation, marital status or parental status, be given every reasonable chance for consideration and admission.</td>

<td>Boalt Hall seeks a student body with a broad set of interests, backgrounds, life experiences, and perspectives. Such diversity is important in a law school, which must train its graduates not only to analyze and interpret the law, but also to reflect on competing viewpoints, advance arguments persuasively in a variety of forums, and develop policies affecting a broad range of people. Historically, Boalt Hall’s diverse student body has produced graduates who have served all segments of society and who have become leaders in many fields of law, including such varied fields as civil rights, corporate, environmental, criminal, intellectual property, and family law. Exposure to a wide array of ideas, outlooks, and experiences is an important part of our students’ educational and professional development.</td>

<td>UC Davis values diversity in its student body and considers it an important factor during the admission process. Diversity of ideas, life and work experiences, cultural and socio-economic background, academic preparation and interests are a few of the factors that will be given consideration. Each applicant brings a unique set of credentials to the admission process and subsequently to the School of Law. The educational experience for each student at UC Davis is expanded and enhanced tremendously by the diversity of the overall student body.</td>

<tr>
<td>University of California—Hastings</td>
<td>75%</td>
<td>$19,930.00</td>
<td>Yes</td>
<td>As a public law school, the University of California, Hastings College of the Law has a responsibility to educate lawyers who will serve the legal needs of all members of society. Hastings seeks each year to enroll students whose intellect, experience, creativity, and personal character will enable them successfully to complete their own legal education, contribute to the education of their classmates, and become accomplished lawyers who serve the needs of the public through the practice of law, the formulation of public policy, legal scholarship, and other professional endeavors. Because numeric criteria do not necessarily indicate whether an applicant will meet or contribute to these goals, Hastings considers a variety of non numeric criteria. These criteria include letters of recommendation, academic honors and awards, the rigor and difficulty of the applicant’s undergraduate and graduate education, communications skills, work experience, public service, and significant achievement in other nonacademic activities. Hastings also considers whether the applicant is among the first in his or her family to attend college, is a member of groups that historically have been underrepresented in law school and the legal profession, or has experienced significant medical, personal, educational, or other adversity.</td>

<td>Northeastern University School of Law seeks a student body with a broad set of interests, backgrounds, life experiences, and perspectives. Our students represent various political ideologies as well as religious, cultural, and social backgrounds, including a large number of gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender students. Students of color represent approximately one-third of our total student body (32 percent of students in our most recent entering class.) The faculty is also diverse: 52 percent are women and 22 percent are people of color. Such diversity is important in a law school, which must train its graduates not only to analyze and interpret the law, but also to reflect on competing viewpoints, advance arguments persuasively in a variety of forums, and develop policies affecting a broad range of people. Historically, the School of Law's diverse student body has produced graduates who have served all segments of society and who have become leaders in many fields of law. Exposure to a wide array of ideas, outlooks, and experiences is critical to law students' educational and professional development.</td>

The Admissions Committee considers a wide range of subjective factors as part of the admission decisions. These include cultural, economic, educational, and geographic background; nonacademic experiences; and other qualities the Admissions Committee may feel are deserving of special consideration in the admission process.

Factors that indicate diversity include, but are not limited to, the following: persevering against substantial obstacles such as economic disadvantage, family or personal adversity, or other hardships, disability, prejudice or discrimination, having lived in a foreign country or spoken a language other than English at home, career goals (with particular attention paid to the applicant’s commitment to public service), employment history, educational background (including graduate study), evidence of a potential for leadership (perhaps demonstrated by extracurricular, school, civic, or community service achievement), special talents or unique life experiences, or geographic diversity.

Western State University values a diverse student body. We strive for representation in terms of age, gender, race, ethnicity, national origin and socio-economic background. We consider many non-academic qualifications including, leadership ability, work experience, hardships overcome, service to others, and other characteristics addressed in the applicant file.

Diversity is one of the many criteria reviewed and is defined as race, economic and underrepresented area of the country.

Broadly.

The law school seeks to enroll a class that represents a rich array of diversity in background, culture, and experience.

We embrace all levels of diversity—of heritage, values, life experiences, and educational objectives.

We seek to enhance the diversity of our student body. In doing so, we consider applicants’ life and work experience, age, socio-economic background, geographic origin, race, ethnicity, gender, and any other characteristic that suggests that an applicants perspective would contribute to the diversity of our first year class.

We define diversity as race, economic and underrepresented area of the country.

<td>Our application asks for any LSAT tests you have taken or plan to take. If you decide to take an LSAT test that you did not indicate on your application, you need to notify the Law Admissions Office so that your application can be placed on hold until the score is received. Once a decision is rendered there is no appeals process; all decisions are final. You can either apply after your score has been received or before, and we will hold your application for all tests taken before our application deadline of April 15. It may be beneficial to submit your application beforehand so that we can begin processing your documents.</td>

FEE WAIVERS

HOW DOES AN APPLICANT OBTAIN AN APPLICATION FEE WAIVER?

| University of California—Davis | UC Davis does not administer an in-house fee waiver program. LSAC fee waivers are honored. Additional information is available at the law school website. | 1-Feb |
| University of California—Hastings | From LSAC |
| University of California—Irvine | Always free to apply. |
| University of California—Los Angeles | Fee waiver applications are available on our website. If an applicant receives an LSAC fee waiver, the law school application fee will automatically be waived once the applicant applies online. |
| Benjamin N. Cardozo (Yeshiva) | Contact the Admissions Office for a fee waiver. If applicant applies through LSAC and receives an LSAC fee waiver, Cardozo will waive the application fee. |
| Case Western Reserve University | Applies online for fee waiver |
| Catholic University of America | Contact the Office of Admissions for fee waiver instructions. |
| Chapman University School of Law | If you did not receive a fee waiver from LSAC, you can request one directly from the Law Admissions Office by submitting a written statement outlining your request and financial circumstances via fax to 888-289-5033. The request should be accompanied by last year's W-2 form or tax return and/or a financial aid award letter specifying your need. Your request will be reviewed by the Asst. Dean of Admissions, Financial Aid and Diversity Initiatives, and you will be notified of a decision within 2-3 business days. Please include an updated e-mail address with your request, as your decision notification will be sent via e-mail. We also grant fee waivers to prospects we meet at nationwide recruiting events and LSAC Forums. If you received a fee waiver from LSAC your application fee is automatically waived when you apply online. |
| Charleston School of Law | The application fee is automatically waived at LSAC for those who apply prior to December 31. After that date, the applicant should contact the Office of Admission. |
| University of Chicago | Through LSAC's fee waiver program |
| Chicago-Kent College of Law | The application fee is waived for all first year JD applicants. |

No new three year programs, but we added a new Two-Year Accelerated Program—launching May 2013. Students save considerable time and living expenses while earning the same academically rigorous Regent legal education taught from a Christian worldview. Students will enter the job market one year sooner than students in a traditional 3-year program. Students study full-time for six consecutive terms by starting in late May as opposed to mid-August. After the first summer, accelerated program students are integrated into the same classes as all other law students, studying the same curriculum under the same professors as enjoyed by students in the traditional three-year program. Students will experience a law-practice externship as a part of the Accelerated Program. Due to a rigorous schedule, students will have less opportunity for extracurricular activities and summer employment. Requires at least a 152 LSAT, a 3.0 cumulative UGPA, and other indicators of high academic promise. Applications and supporting documents should be submitted via the LSAC website. Priority consideration date for the two-year program is January 15. Late applications are considered on a space-available basis. Students admitted to the program must submit an enrollment agreement and seat deposit no later than April 1. It is recommended that applicants take the October or December LSAT preceding the desired June enrollment. Applicants must submit an addendum in their application addressing their reasons for seeking enrollment in an accelerated, rigorous program of study. The admissions committee will be looking for a commitment to disciplined, intensive legal study.
In the past year, have you added any special admissions programs that do not require the applicant to take the LSAT? If so, do you accept any alternative tests? Have you received a waiver from the ABA Section of Legal Education for any admission programs not using the LSAT?
