

A man felt a tickle in his nose, but he was in public and couldn't bring his finger to the dark hole on his face to itch it. He inhaled sharply once, twice, three times. People around him started backing up to avoid the inevitable splash zone.

The man's head tilted all the way back, revealing a peek into his large nostril. A tiny cluster of dynamite had been placed along the lining of his nose. Looking up through the nose hair were two tiny gnomes wearing small, pointed hard hats!

"Let 'er rip!" One said to the other. A small lever was pushed and the man let out the largest sneeze anyone has ever seen! A small flame snorted from one nostril, and he was left with smoke coming out of his face.