

Swedish Takeover

This city has an appetite for Scandinavia. The region has already left its mark on the local dining scene with the first Nordic food festival in 2015 and the continued popularity of restaurants like Aquavit. Now, it's poised to influence NYC fashion with Acne Studios' new shop in the West Village. The Stockholm-based brand boasts cool men's and women's apparel (like the jackets, above) in geometric cuts. Shoppers will also find minimalist leather sneakers, futuristic sunglasses with bold frames, and bucket bags that cinch with belt buckles. | Acne Studios, 54-60 Eighth Ave., 212.633.0002

A Step Up

Shoppers will find Repetto's signature ballerina flats in every color of the rainbow at its recently opened SoHo boutique, but the French shoe brand is debuting some fancy new styles at the store this season. This "Virgin Tutu" sandal, for example, combines dancer-esque white ostrich feathers with rockstar-ready studs and black kidskin suede for the ultimate foot fashion statement. Complete your look with the store's small selection of dreamy, gauzy apparel. | Repetto, 400 W. Broadway, 917.999.0501

Barneys Is Back!

More than 20 years after bidding farewell to its original home in Chelsea, Barneys New York returns to the neighborhood where it was founded in 1923. The five-story shopping mecca (which occupies nearly a full city block) offers ready-to-wear apparel for men and women, accessories, cosmetics and shoes galore. It's all anchored by a vast spiral staircase, the focal point of the store. | Barneys New York, 101 Seventh Ave., 646.264.6400

Fit for a King

Ready to feel like royalty? Head to the Mansion on Madison to shop at the New York Trunk Clubhouse, which offers men personal styling sessions. Shoppers try on casual and formal apparel from more than 80 top brands, like Theory, Barbour and Vince, in luxurious fitting lounges designed by fashion houses like John Varvatos and DL1961 (right). The best part is that they ship the final look (made of 10-12 pieces) right to your door—no extra suitcase necessary. | New York Trunk Clubhouse, 457 Madison Ave., 646.780.5310
