

ARNE FJELDSTAD MEMORIAL INTERNATIONAL JOURNALISM SCHOLARSHIP

The King's College is offering $20,000 in annual scholarships for at least one international journalism student to attend the NYC Semester in Journalism program each year.

DETAILS

The scholarship funds either two $10,000 scholarships to help students attend NYCJ. The $10,000 scholarships cover the bulk of tuition and housing for students (leaving costs for transport to NY, food and a small amount for tuition). In some rare instances, one student may be selected for the scholarship each year and fully funded. The students will be placed in a newsroom internship in NYC for 20 hours per week (receiving 6 academic credits). They will also take three classes at The King's College with other students in the NYC Semester in Journalism program.

ELIGIBILITY

Outstanding journalism undergraduates from Africa, India, Latin America, Central Eastern Europe (including the Balkans and the Baltic countries) are welcome to apply. Other countries or regions may also be welcome. Feel free to inquire.

Applicants must demonstrate they have excellent abilities in the English language and know how to report. We want to see bylines that are impressive to newsrooms. Applicants should be seriously considering or pursuing a career in journalism in their home country. Applicants should be comfortable studying at a liberal arts Christian college that is committed to teaching the truths of Christianity alongside journalism skills. They should also be committed to being part of the NYCJ community and The King's College community of students.

APPLY

Top students apply in advance at <https://www.tkc.edu/nycs> and should be in touch with Eleni Glader eglader@tkc.edu about their application.

WHO WAS ARNE FJELDSTAD

He was a Norwegian man who was a Lutheran minister and a night editor at the Norwegian newspaper Aftenposten. Arne helped develop The Media Project, an international network of working journalists who care about good journalism, particularly religion reporting. Arne was beloved by many people in Africa, India, Latin America and other corners of the globe. The scholarship to deserving international students preserves his legacy of kind mentoring and encouragement to international journalists.

ABOUT THE KING'S COLLEGE

Through its commitment to the truths of Christianity and a biblical worldview, The King's College seeks to transform society by preparing students for careers in which they help to shape and eventually lead strategic public and private institutions, and by supporting faculty members as they directly engage culture through writing and speaking publicly on critical issues.

ABOUT MPJI

The McCandlish Phillips Journalism Institute was formed in 2014 at The King's College in New York City with the mission to train students for careers in media. The institute teaches journalism, supervises internships and fosters a community of ethical reporting and writing among top journalists.

MPJI hosts several events each year for journalists working in New York City, and offers a 15 spots each semester for student journalists in our NYC Semester in Journalism (NYCJ) program, working at a news outlet and taking classes at The King's College.
