This will be our third discussion on the topic of lesser-known companies that were made in the early period of stretch glass.

The first call in February 2017 featured the lesser-known company of Vineland Flint Glass Company. In November we explored another of the companies - Lancaster Glass Company.

In this March 8, 2018 call, we will be focusing on U. S. Glass Company of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. This company produced the widest range of stretch glass. It seems like there are distinctive, related groupings with some lines being represented by certain colors. This call we will be featuring the transparent colors - ones you can see through.
