Erin K. Jackson is the founder and president of Inspire Santé, a nonprofit dedicated to promoting awareness of pelvic pain disorders. Through the organization’s efforts, she empowers women to advocate for their own identities, bodies, and health.

Jackson is an experienced and engaging speaker who merges her personal pelvic pain battle with inspiring policy solutions for women’s health, pain, and the patient’s healthcare experience. She suffered from excruciating pelvic pain for nearly 10 years, but through sheer force of will, she survived, graduated first in her law school class, and now fights to ensure that other women have a clearer road to recovery.

Jackson has spoken at events across the country to break down taboos, advocate for patients’ voices, and empower women. Her past engagements include the San Diego Pain Summit and the American Physical Therapy Association’s annual conference, and she has been featured in prominent media outlets such as Prevention Magazine. Jackson is also the managing partner of a boutique healthcare law firm in Chicago, where she collaborates with providers to improve the patient-centeredness of their practices.

“Healthcare providers have the power to inspire their patients to live again. The smallest things make the greatest difference.”
