WHAT PEOPLE ARE SAYING

“Ditmas Lit is a monthly reading series in the back of a bar called Hinterlands. The chairs fill up, and so about half the audience sits on the floor, drinking. There’s no representative style. One minute it’s erotic poetry, the next its a story called ‘Pancake Spring.’ What unifies the events is the sense of occasion. D. L. readers appreciate that if you’re going to schlep to a bar on a Wednesday night and have a piece read to you, rather than read it yourself in bed, as God intended, then the experience may as well feature some element of showmanship. They choose work they’re excited about. They speak into the microphone. They bring it.”

“This bar is fully booked! Book worms in Ditmas Park have a chance to nerd out—and booze up—in their own neighborhood. The creators of Ditmas Lit aim to showcase local talent and give literature lovers a chance to bond over booze, books, and tacos.”
