Strategies for Publishing and Disseminating Juvenile Justice-related Research Findings:

1. Understanding the shifts in the utility of applied scholarship in public policy across colleges and universities

2. Sourcing the demand for juvenile justice inside and outside of academia:
   I. Building relationships with key funding partners
   II. Exploring Opportunities for Partnerships with Strange Bedfellows
   III. Thinking about Scholar Activism as Scholar Entrepreneurism

3. Mastering the Art of Access for audiences outside of academia

Welcome to the Journal of Juvenile Justice

The Department of Justice (DOJ) Office of Justice Programs Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention (OJJDP), sponsor of the Journal of Juvenile Justice, is not currently accepting manuscript submissions.

Since 2011, the Journal has covered a wide variety of juvenile justice issues including delinquency prevention, intervention, and treatment; system responses; and youth victimization. OJJDP remains committed to providing resources to prevent and respond to juvenile delinquency and victimization and continues to advance this mission. Visit www.ojjdp.gov to access research and statistics, program, and funding information.

Juvenile Justice Appropriations
FY 2002-2019, CRS

(dollars in millions)
Funding for programs authorized by the JJDPA, as well as for other non-JJDPA grant programs that are administered by OJJDP, is provided through the Juvenile Justice Programs account in the annual Commerce, Justice, Science, and Related Agencies appropriations act. After the restructuring of juvenile justice grant programs in 2002, total funding for these programs began to decline. This decline generally continued through FY2007, after which funding for these programs started to increase. For FY2010, Congress provided $424 million for juvenile justice programs—the largest appropriation since FY2003. Juvenile justice funding then generally declined again from FY2010 through FY2017. After appropriating a low of $247 million for juvenile justice programs in FY2017, Congress increased funding for both FY2018 and FY2019. Through the Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2019 (P.L. 116-6), Congress appropriated $287 million for juvenile justice programs for FY2019—the largest appropriation since the $424 million in FY2010.
