The South East Doctoral Training Centre (SEDTC) and South East Network for Social Sciences (SeNSS) invite you to their annual conference. The conference brings together ESRC-funded doctoral students and academics from SEDTC and SeNSS institutions across the range of social sciences for talks and competitions. This year's theme will be society and policy at a time of change.

In recent years, political landscapes and boundaries have experienced major changes, arguably driven by discontent with conventional politics and institutions. Emerging divisions in the political scene, as exemplified by the 2016 UK vote in favour of Brexit and the election of Donald Trump as the 45th President of the United States suggest a historic shift is underway, potentially unravelling the post-Second World War global order of European integration and free-trading United States. The potential collapse of the established political order reflects more broadly deepening global divisions socially, economically and environmentally. Increasingly, previously stable structures are realigning in uncertain ways.

We welcome proposals for short presentations of 10 minutes in length and panels illustrating how the social sciences may explain recent political shifts and their potential impacts on public policy and/or society.

Eligibility

The call for papers is open to ESRC-funded Doctoral Researchers from SEDTC and SeNSS institutions. Those attending are encouraged to register early.

The conference is also open to all current SeNSS postgraduate researchers and academics as well as new SeNSS researchers who will start their studentships in October 2017.

The conference is free to attend.
