"Donald Baechler distills a collection of images and objects into a single canvas, creating a clear form that triumphs over a background of contained chaos. Similarly, a well-designed room is the balance and clear harmony of many disparate parts."

Inspiration: The Caustic Peninsula

"The color palette was inspired by the Baechler piece and complements a bold wallpaper accent. These colors are dark, rich, and saturated, creating an overall effect that's neither masculine nor feminine, just über sophisticated."

"This Cassina table was first designed and produced over a hundred years ago, and it's still fresh and contemporary today. It's perfect for this room where balance comes from the mix of classic architecture and contemporary furnishings."

"I love the simple elegance of this S86 island by Acheo from Studio Anise! It's another great foil to the classic architecture of the room."

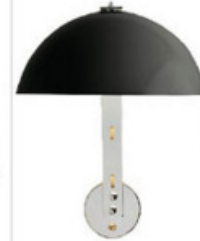

"I wanted to make dining in this space more comfortable and casual. This Cassina chair is a great scale for comfort. The material is easy and durable, but the style is still there in full force."

"This nanimarquina area rug is all wool with a low pile in a dark color, so it's easy to maintain in a dining space. The natural variation in color creates a great texture without introducing another pattern to the room."

"I love the sense of humor in this fixture from Ingo Maurer! It's so beautiful, and then once you see what it is, you have to smile. It keeps the room from being too serious."

"A little bit modern, a little bit industrial. This Design Within Reach sconce helps define the kitchen area as the more functional part of the space."
