Higher education needs to do more to prepare students for the complex challenges facing our world. If you're reading this, we bet you agree, and that you're not one to stand by and watch from the sidelines. We can help you take the next step.

This virtual program for university educators and leaders responds to the current opportunities and challenges in higher education, and combines the best of our teaching team's offerings from 2020 and 2021.

We will help you apply new ways of teaching and learning in your courses and programs. You'll be able to use what you've learned whether you're teaching virtually or in-person, or leading programs for students, faculty and other campus stakeholders outside the classroom. This workshop is virtual, but it's focused on personal connections and application in real-time: individual coaching, small group working sessions, and large group learning experiences. Offline, you'll work on activities and projects at your own pace with support from coaches and peers.

Who should apply

- Higher education faculty: tenure-track, non-tenure track and adjunct/clinical faculty
- Higher education administrators/leaders (those who serve students and/or faculty at their schools, including program directors and managers, deans, associate deans, provosts, etc)
- Educators from 4-year and 2-year post-secondary institutions are welcome

What the program costs

$5,000 USD/person

- 20% discount for faculty from schools with students participating in the University Innovation Fellows
- Limited number of scholarships for faculty from Minority-Serving Institutions (80% discount)

FORMAT

Two-part virtual program with personal coaching

SCHEDULE

- STAGE 1
  July 13 - July 30, 2021
  weekly community sessions on Tuesdays, 7-10am Pacific Time coaching in small groups on Thursdays

- STAGE 2
  September 28 - October 12, 2021
  weekly community sessions on Tuesdays, 7-10am Pacific Time
  coaching in small groups on Thursdays

NOTE: In between Stages 1 and 2, you’ll schedule one personal coaching session at your convenience

APPLY

bit.ly/tls-apply

Deadline: May 31, 2021

CONTACT

Leticia Britos Cavagnaro, PhD
leticia@dschool.stanford.edu
Program highlights

Our in-context approach maximizes the relevance and depth of your learning
This program provides escape moments when you are immersed (virtually) in a new context with new like-minded people, while also keeping your feet grounded (literally) in your teaching. You’re applying your learnings in real-time to your work.

Our coach-supported, experiment-driven approach supports you when it matters the most
We will serve as your coaches every week so that you can learn what works in your context and in real-time. Sustained experimentation will allow you to go deeper and cement your practice as a pedagogical innovator.

It’s virtual but with a human touch
This virtual program will include weekly synchronous sessions, in which participants will meet as a group and learn together, as well as personal coaching sessions. “Virtual” doesn’t mean “Zoom fatigue” here. In fact, a participant in our first virtual workshop said, “Through your effective use of activities and technologies, I felt more a part of this community than I usually feel at face-to-face conferences.”

It allows you to move at the pace that works for you
We all learn at different paces. Our program combines synchronous sessions with self-paced modules that guide you in activities you can complete in your own time. In addition, a thread of guided reflection will help you process your learning.

It works with different teaching modalities
Whether you teach in person, online or use a hybrid model, this program will help you create experiences that unleash the full learning potential of students, leveraging what we know about how people learn.

It’s an opportunity to develop your Scholarship of Teaching and Learning with research-supported approaches
Developing a Scholarship of Teaching and Learning — the systemic inquiry into student learning — is increasingly valued in academia, alongside conducting research in other disciplinary areas. This program will provide you with an opportunity to grow as an educational innovator and scholar.
In between Stages 1 and 2, you’ll schedule one personal coaching session at your convenience.