NEEDED SUPPLIES & EQUIPMENT

One of the great things about field paleontology is that the process hasn't changed much since it started more than 150 years ago. It's mostly done with simple tools you likely have laying around your house - screwdrivers, awls, hammers, chisels, pickaxes . . . Oh - and lots of elbow grease. We'd love for you to provide some of that elbow grease, but if you have extra tools laying around, why not donate them to the BBPI instead of just throwing them out? Your old tools could help us save precious resources in the field. Check out the list below to see just some of the items we need.
