Leading a national movement to better serve, resource, and inspire permanently-sidelined athletes to cope with their tremendous loss and find a meaningful way forward following medical exit from sport.

EMILY ALLARD, SIDELINED USA MENTOR
We sincerely thank you for your interest in our organization. Our team has worked tirelessly to produce meaningful resources, provide specialized support services, and advocate for better after-care for medically disqualified student-athletes through educational seminars and original research. As the first and only national non-profit serving this demographic of young people, we have experienced exponential growth in program demand year after year and 2022 is no exception.

Thanks to the support of our donors and sponsors, we provided 2,400 athlete-support care contacts in 2022. We experienced a 31% increase in use of our online resources and 198% increase in athlete care package requests. Through our Campus Liaison Program launched this June, we have partnered with representatives from athletic programs at 82 schools, both secondary and collegiate, to provide specialized support resources to sidelined athletes. This is just a sampling of what is made possible through community support of Sidelined USA.

We anticipate the needs to continue to increase in 2023 as the word spreads about our unique program. Though demand is higher than ever, our financial resources have not yet recovered from COVID’s impact on the economy. Financial support of Sidelined USA is more important than ever as it is our desire to keep from having to cut back resources in the coming year. We invite you to power our pioneering work in 2023 by visiting www.sidelinedusa.org/donate to make a tax-deductible donation or become a monthly donor by selecting “monthly” on our donation form.

Financial support of Sidelined USA provides hope and healing for medically disqualified student-athletes. Your gift will help us to provide more hope, for more young people in the coming year.

Gratefully,

Christine Pinalto / Executive Director

"Receiving the care package and feeling understood by people who have experienced the same struggles as me was uplifting. I have worn the ‘MORE THAN AN ATHLETE’ bracelet everyday for the past year. This care package and everyone within the Sidelined USA team made me feel appreciated and helped me to recover both physically and mentally.”

About Sidelined USA

A first-of-its-kind 501(c)3 nonprofit organization supporting, resourcing, & advocating for permanently sidelined student-athletes nationwide

MISSION
To reunite permanently-sidelined student-athletes with their passions and inspire them to find a meaningful way forward

VISION
To see athletes create a positive mindset within themselves, requiring their personal best, in order to confidently face and overcome their challenges, both on and off the field/court

PURPOSE
To make specialized support resources available to all sidelined student-athletes nationwide at no cost and to elevate the standard of care for medically disqualified athletes through research, education, and advocacy
Our Why

At Sidelined USA, we recognize that a medical exit from sport caused by career-ending injury, health condition, or concussions can be a devastating, life-altering event with significant and long-lasting psychological impact. The research indicates that permanently-sidelined athletes are at high risk for depression, isolation, anxiety, identity loss, alcohol and drug abuse, disordered eating, suicidal ideation, and diminished life satisfaction even years later.

These athletes are in a vulnerable position and frequently do not feel empowered to advocate for themselves, choosing instead to struggle in silence. Sidelined USA bridges the gap to be that advocate for improved after-care support while also empowering sidelined athletes to “find their voice” and seek the help they need.

“Being connected with Sidelined USA had been the greatest blessings of my life. When I received my care package from Sidelined, it reminded me that I’m more than athlete and my sport. They made me feel a part of not only the community, but family. There is something so beautiful when we remind each other that we are not alone in this fight and encourage one another to share our stories. I hope that anyone receiving a care package knows that it’s more than just a box, but one filled with hope, light, and support.”

EMMANUEL BELMAR

“It was hard to walk away from the game I love, especially after having one of my best games. It was hard overcoming the concussion and I felt like nobody cared. Sidelined USA provided encouraging words and a package that showed me I wasn’t the only person going through it! It made me feel much better. I’m grateful for a team like Sidelined, that showed interest in me when no one else did.”

CALI LONARDELLI

“When I received my care package from Sidelined USA, I instantly knew that I’d found an organization that just got it, one that knew what a painful process medical retirement is. I still wear my ‘more than an athlete’ bracelet and frequently wore my Sidelined shirt while I was in the hospital for over a month. I cannot express my gratitude to the Sidelined team, the Connection Group, and the donors who make the program possible. Thank you to everyone who is helping medically retired athletes find their footing.”
Carly, a recently medically retired synchronized figure skater whose Olympic aspirations were cut short due to an extreme training accident and severe leg injuries, wrote to us about her situation and inquired about resources to help her. In response to a support contact from our team, Carly wrote:

“Reading your email brought me to tears. I was fully expecting a nice, automated response to the intake form I submitted, however, I quickly realized it was clearly someone that had taken the time to actually sit down, read, and respond to me. I was completely overwhelmed! To feel seen and cared for by a complete stranger was really amazing. I took your advice and started listening to the Sidelined Stories podcast - the interviews were so incredibly relatable and voiced a lot of the things I have felt/experienced . . . Thank you so much for your help and kindness! Hearing from other sidelined athletes who once felt just as lost and lonely as I am, yet made it through to a brighter place gives me hope that perhaps one day I can do the same.”

Thank you so much for your help and kindness! Hearing from other sidelined athletes who once felt just as lost and lonely as I am, yet made it through to a brighter place gives me hope that perhaps one day I can do the same."

And later, after another email: "Some words that jumped out at me from your last email were, 'You are exactly where you need to be right now - grieving, reflecting, pursuing hope and motivation...all are worthy of your time. Be patient with yourself.' It had truly never occurred to me to think of the situation in this light; that this is exactly where I should be after such a dramatic shift in my life. I was robbed of many golden years of my competitive career. While it doesn't make it suck any less, it does give some purpose and meaning to the pain in my heart."

Care Packages

143 ATHLETE CARE PACKAGES DELIVERED

Filled with gifts and resources designed and inspired by our network of mentor sidelined athletes, our care packages acknowledge the challenges medically disqualified athletes face and provide specialized support from those who understand this transition first-hand.

"The day I received my package was also the day I felt my smile peek out after being hidden for so long."

ERIKA HAYES
2022 Program Spotlight: Connection Group

A community of athletes who have experienced a medically-forced exit from sport, led by former athletes who personally experienced a medical retirement.

Meets virtually, once a month, to support one another through the transition following medical retirement and to discuss issues relevant to medical exit from sport.

“My medical retirement came rather abruptly. I felt lost and didn’t know where or who to turn to. Sidelined USA reached out to me after I announced my retirement, and they’ve been there for me in so many ways since. Life is tough and can throw many challenges your way, but losing your sport feels truly earth shattering. To anyone who has experienced having to walk away from the thing that seemingly provided you everything, know that you are not alone in what you are feeling. Losing your identity and sense of purpose you found through your sport is a different kind of pain that not everyone can understand, let alone sympathize with. I was super excited when Sidelined USA launched their connection group, and I have had nothing but positive experiences and conversations. The connection group has brought and will continue to bring together sidelined athletes and provide a space where people just “get it.” This group of people is truly something special and we are so much more than just athletes. Know that and remember that, but if you forget, there’s always someone at Sidelined USA who can remind you of your worth outside of your athletic identity. This is a true community and the level of understanding between each and every person associated with Sidelined USA is unmatched.”

“It’s a huge asset to have in my tool box. In school I never learned how to deal with a situation like being medically disqualified . . . But now I have resources where my athletes can feel seen.”

DIANA JACOBO ARROYO
Recognizing the lack of research on the psychological impact of medically-forced exit from sport, Sidelined USA conducted its own research survey to investigate the psychological domain for athletes experiencing medical retirement and produce data on the related mental health risks and athlete satisfaction of available support. In 2022, we closed our study with 104 full study participants and analyzed our data.

Based on our findings, we propose that a medical retirement from sport should be considered a potential life crisis which warrants specialized after-care plans and resources in order to provide much needed support to athletes experiencing such a non-normative exit from sport. We are currently submitting our research for publication and hope to share our full findings in 2023.
The Sidelined USA team had the privilege of being invited to speak on various topics this year including student-athlete transition, mental health for injured and medically retired athletes, and helping athletes adapt and thrive after medically-forced exit from sport. In this year’s engagements, we educated over 1400 athletes, athletic trainers, and athletic program representatives.
“From a distance, a rowing crew strikes onlookers in graceful synchrony, gliding as one across the water. Yet this visual beauty belies the internal strife, toil, and pain synonymous with the sport. The endless struggles demanded by rowing is one I grew to love. During a practice in the spring of 2013, however, the pain of the work became excruciating. With each stroke of the oar, the feeling compounded until I lost the ability to use my hand. As tears welled in my eyes, I counted the minutes until the practice was over. Unbeknownst to me, this moment would mark the last time I rowed competitively.

Ultimately, I found out that the repetitive motions of rowing had caused permanent nerve and tendon damage in my wrist and forearm. After two long years of treatments and subsequent surgeries, I reluctantly accepted a medical exemption and forfeited my remaining athletic eligibility. My primary identity as a Division I student-athlete at The University of Texas at Austin was in peril. My coach restricted me from attending practice, isolating me from my social support system of teammates. I was denied medical and psychological care to assist in my physical and emotional recovery because the athletic department no longer perceived me as valuable to the program. Upon graduation, my athletic alumni association membership was revoked as I was no longer part of the active team roster. Suddenly, I found myself without the sport and identity I had built my life around.

As a sidelined student-athlete, I struggled to navigate life beyond sport. Identity loss, anxiety and shame followed me into every facet of my life, and with no one to relate to, I truly believed it was a weight I would forever carry. Fortunately, that changed when I found Sidelined USA. During my first conversation with a Sidelined USA mentor, I felt the understanding I had sought since my medical retirement. As she told her story, emotions and experiences – things I had never shared with anyone – seemed like they were pulled out of my head. There was comfort in finally knowing I was not alone. This feeling of validation and support, fueled by compassion and community, sparked a significant moment in my healing and recovery.

With the help of Sidelined USA, I decided I could not continue to let the injury define me. It was no linear process, but I gained insights and learned lessons that remain relevant to my professional and personal life. I acquired a disciplined lifestyle and embraced change to discover new passions, such as practicing yoga and volunteering with Young Life and the Neighborhood Longhorns program. I developed self-compassion by learning to forgive and love myself as someone who was no longer a student-athlete. Most importantly, I turned my pain into purpose and found my voice to advocate for others by building my career in the University of Texas athletic department to support student-athlete success and mentoring injured student-athletes with Sidelined USA.

I am excited to extend my involvement with the organization and participate in the Sidelined USA Connection Group as a mentor. During these monthly calls, sidelined athletes connect in an environment that fosters investment in each other and self-belief in our potential. It’s a space where we embrace vulnerability and build hope as we discuss our shared experiences. It’s tough, it’s real, and it’s empowering. Personally, participating in these calls as a sidelined athlete provided the support and encouragement I needed to shift my perspective throughout my recovery. As a mentor, I will serve as the advocate I desperately needed after my injury by providing others with emotional guidance and support through this transition in their life.”
