Loon Conservation in the Adirondack Park

A captivating icon of the Adirondacks, the Common Loon is a key sentinel of freshwater aquatic ecosystems, providing valuable insight into the health of the lakes and ponds where it lives.

The Adirondack Center for Loon Conservation merges the worlds of scientific research and outreach to enhance understanding of Common Loon ecology and conservation, and to inspire sound strategies to better protect the health of the environment in and beyond New York's Adirondack Park.

Through our long-term research, conservation projects, and engaging educational programming, the Adirondack Loon Center addresses threats to both individual loons and to the Adirondack loon population as a whole.

Our efforts help ensure that Common Loons remain an integral and vital part of New York's wildlife heritage, and that their haunting calls continue to echo cross Adirondack lakes for generations to come.

About the Adirondack Loon Legacy Fund

The Adirondack Loon Legacy Fund was established by Winifred Meiselman in 2015 in loving memory of her husband, Dr. David Meiselman, a world-renowned economist, to provide ongoing support for the research and outreach programs of the Adirondack Center for Loon Conservation.

Win's dream is that her initial gift will grow into a sizable endowment to help ensure the continuation of the Adirondack Loon Center's work in the years ahead.

You are invited to become a Legacy Society Member! Please join us in building the Adirondack Loon Legacy Fund by endowing your annual donation to the Loon Center, donating stock, making an extra contribution, or with your planned gift.

Your thoughtful generosity will help protect these magnificent birds, and the spectacular Adirondack lakes where they live.
