UBC High Notes
A year of renewal
Newsletter of the School Music at the University of British Columbia

Fall 2010
Director’s Welcome

It is a pleasure to welcome you to the twelfth edition of High Notes, in which we celebrate the recent activities and major achievements of faculty, staff, students, and alumni of the UBC School of Music. I hope you enjoy this snapshot, which captures the diversity, quality, and impact of our activities and contributions. I think you will agree that we are a vibrant community of creators, performers, and scholars! High Notes outlines some of the many ways in which the School of Music exemplifies the three key pillars of UBC’s new Strategic Plan (www.strategicplan.ubc.ca): Student Learning, Research Excellence (including music performance and composition), and Community Engagement. I warmly invite you to read about the School of Music in these pages, and to attend some of our many concerts and opera performances in the coming months and years.

The School of Music has much to celebrate this year! In addition to depicting the full scope of our activities and achievements, this edition of High Notes shines a spotlight on two major capital projects that have revitalized our performance and teaching facilities.

This past summer has witnessed a major rejuvenation of our Recital Hall, which had not seen a significant upgrade since the Music Building opened in 1968. Thanks to the generosity of Roy (BCom ’61) and Gunilla Barnett, the beautifully revitalized venue, now named Roy Barnett Recital Hall, will provide our students and faculty with an acoustically superior and technologically advanced hall that will enhance learning, professional development, and audience enjoyment for years to come. The project brings many enhancements, including a larger stage, an extended and improved stage-surround, significant recording and audio-visual equipment upgrades, and handsome new seats. Roy Barnett Recital Hall is the venue for the majority of our recitals and concerts, including our multi-faceted Wednesday Noon Hour series. It is the heart of the UBC School of Music, and I hope you will visit Barnett Hall for a concert soon. I am sure you will be delighted and impressed when you see and hear the improvements.

This fall we are also reopening the historic Old Auditorium. One of the original UBC buildings, dating from 1925, it too has been significantly upgraded over the past two years, thoroughly modernized with its historic character and charm returned to full glory. The $21 million project, supported by funding from the Province of British Columbia, the University of British Columbia, the UBC Faculty of Arts, the UBC School of Music, and many generous private donors, brings renewed life and musical energy to a beautiful and noble building and stage. The renewed Old Auditorium will feature productions by the UBC Opera Ensemble, and concerts and recitals presented by our other ensembles, by faculty and visiting artists, and by a variety of partners in the community. We look forward to the delight it will bring music lovers throughout the community. In the pages that follow you can read more about the Old Auditorium and the restoration of this beautiful landmark.

With these renovations, the UBC School of Music now has a wonderful group of three superb venues available to us to perform in. Roy Barnett Recital Hall (255 seats), the Old Auditorium (535 seats), and the glorious Chan Shun Concert Hall in the Chan Centre for the Performing Arts (1189 seats) together provide our students and faculty with an enviable combination of venues, all of the finest caliber, and up-to-date in technical capacities. Few other Schools can match the facilities we now enjoy and that shape the training of the next generation. We are very fortunate indeed, and it is an honour to share with our audiences the many joys of great music, and the thrill of emerging talent.

I hope this edition of High Notes will reinforce your interest in our activities, encourage your participation, and inspire your support. For information about our concerts and programs, or about how you can invest in our scholarship endowments or major projects, please visit our website at www.music.ubc.ca. I also welcome any ideas, questions, or comments you may wish to share with me. Thank you for making our music part of your world!

Roy Barnett Recital Hall
A passion for music, a desire to help students

Twenty years after he retired, Roy Barnett (BCom ‘61) was determined to play the piano. At 72, he enrolled at the Victoria Conservatory of Music.

Four years later, Barnett plays a range of classical music which includes some Beethoven sonatas, Bach preludes and fugues, and Chopin études.

“I'm hoping to develop my playing to a high level and am having a lot of fun in the process,” says Barnett, former treasurer of the School of Music. “I have always admired performances by classical pianists,” recalls Barnett. “I played and performed classical music on the accordion until my late teens, but knew all along that it was a much less versatile instrument than the piano. In the 1980s, I bought a piano but didn’t have enough time to devote to practicing seriously on it. Time passed, and finally it was my wife, Gunilla, who urged me most persuasively, to start taking lessons. The decision to do so was one of the high points in my life.”

A lifelong interest in music led Roy, with the full support of his wife, Gunilla, to make a gift of $2 million dollars to the UBC School of Music. “Hundreds of events take place in the Recital Hall every year,” says Professor Richard Kurtz, Director of the School of Music. “It has been the core of the music building since it opened in 1968 and the renewed space will allow both undergraduate and graduate students to develop as solo and chamber music performers.” Enhanced acoustics, new audiovisual equipment, updated aesthetics, and increased accessibility make the Roy Barnett Recital Hall an essential space for budding musicians. The enlarged and reconfigured stage will improve the acoustics of students’ performances and allow audience members to benefit from a more intimate experience with the musicians.

“It's exciting to think that I will actually see and hear the results and benefits that have been realized from this particular renovation,” Barnett says.

“I felt that the opportunity to fund the renewal of the Recital Hall was an exciting and very effective way to give back to the community,” says Barnett of enhancing the facilities for the education and professional development of music students. “It appealed to me instantly, especially since my funding of this truly worthwhile project would enable me to participate, to some extent, in certain decisions to be made during the renovation. This involvement would be most satisfying.”

The 255-seat concert hall and rehearsal space is occupied nearly every day of the week with student recitals, ensemble programs and performances by faculty, alumni and guest artists. “It’s exciting to think that I will actually see and hear the results and benefits that have been realized from this particular renovation,” Barnett says.

“From classical to contemporary genres, the Roy Barnett Recital Hall will allow students to develop like never before. The new state-of-the-art audiovisual equipment will encourage the development of electro-acoustic music, the combination of electronic technology with live performance. Updated recording facilities will also enable students and faculty to review and archive their performances based on the latest recording standards.

“It's essential to hear yourself playing,” says Chris Hutchinson, a 4th year flute major who has performed annual recitals in the hall since 2006. “To be able to hear yourself under the pressures of performance as well as how others hear you is very beneficial for developing one's career.”

As he embarks on his final year at UBC, Hutchinson recognizes the increasing importance of recordings and performances, especially on high definition video.

“Many universities require you to submit a DVD when applying to graduate programs. They're looking for the whole package: stage presence, sound, technique, command of the stage. These professional resources will give UBC students a competitive edge.”

“This generous gift represents the power of individual philanthropy,” says Kurtz. “Roy’s relationship as a proud alumnus and music lover quintessentially represents the School of Music’s efforts to support a culture of music in the community. He understands the importance of music in everyday life.”

When asked about his vision for the hall, Barnett says, “It’s a facility to be proud of and should be kept in top condition. These renovations will help the hall become more effective in the development of students in the School of Music and provide memorable experiences for all who use it.”

A Fitting Tribute
The UBC School of Music began with the remarkable leadership of a musical duo.

In 1946, Harry Adaskin (1901 – 1994), a violinist, educator and broadcaster, moved to Vancouver with his wife and piano instructor, Frances Marr Adaskin (1900 – 2001), to become the first head of the Department of Music. Together they pioneered the new academic discipline and established a following that has continued to endure.

“I talk to people today who still say they absolutely loved his classes,” says Martine Carter, a former piano student of Frances and friend of the Adaskins. “Harry was much beloved. His classes were always over flowing because he spoke with remarkable erudition. People respected him for his knowledge!”

Steeped in classical music, the Adaskins played a vital role in shaping what would become the School of Music. Reminiscent of their many years touring together throughout North America and Europe, both husband and wife performed in weekly concerts at UBC and helped to foster an appreciation of contemporary music. Based on his lifelong interest in music, literature and painting, Harry taught a popular course on music appreciation. The couple’s passion for Canadian art (their circle of friends included Emily Carr, members of the Group of Seven and Frank Lloyd Wright) undoubtedly influenced their work and enriched Vancouver’s cultural life.

When renovations of UBC’s Old Auditorium began in 2008, it was a close friend of the Adaskins who spotted the opportunity to honour this couple in a historic landmark that has seen 80 years of student concerts, opera and classes.

“There has never been a more appropriate way to memorialize their contributions to the City of Vancouver,” says Kitty Heller (LLB ’76) of the commemorative plaque that will be unveiled on October 12 in the revitalized Old Auditorium. “Those of us who had the privilege of knowing Harry and Fran have never forgotten the impact they had on our lives including the wonderful solo ragtime piano recitals that Fran started to play at the Art Gallery in her eighties.”

Thanks to Heller’s efforts, former students, friends and colleagues joined together to raise funds in honour of Harry and Frances Adaskin’s legacy at UBC. “This is a most fitting tribute for an extraordinary couple,” says Carter. “I was a great admirer of them both. They were a great addition to the Canadian cultural landscape.”

Harry remained head of the department until 1958 and continued to teach until 1973. It was said that Frances accompanied him to every class until his retirement.
Old Auditorium
Where memories (and legends) are made

When the Old Auditorium was slated to be demolished nearly a decade ago, a voice and opera student was compelled to take action. He called CBC to cover the story.

“I was adamant that this building shouldn’t be torn down,” says Hussein Janmohamed (BMus ’96, MMus ’98), a Vancouver-based community music educator, composer, and co-founder of the Vancouver and Canadian Ismaili Muslim Youth Choirs. Janmohamed fondly recalls spending the majority of his student life in the Old Auditorium rehearsing, taking masterclasses, performing with the choir, and eating at Yum Yum’s. He has since performed with the Ismaili Muslim Youth Choirs for His Highness the Aga Khan and collaborated on a choral piece for the Dalai Lama.

“History has happened in this building. We often forget that buildings carry cultural memories which in turn can inform and shape our society.”

Janmohamed’s passion for the theatre and concert hall echoed the sentiments of countless others including Professor Nancy Hermiston, Director of the Voice and Opera Division.

“Nothing else in the city compares to this theatre,” says Hermiston who spearheaded the project. “The extraordinary amount of work that has gone into renovating this beloved UBC landmark will enable students to develop professionally for generations to come.”

After 10 years of planning and two years of renovations, the Old Auditorium reopens its doors to students, faculty and the community on October 12, 2010.

From basic renovations to technically advanced upgrades, the revitalized Old Auditorium will provide students with an exclusive training and performance facility. The proscenium theatre boasts a 60-person orchestra pit with mechanical lift, a 2000 sq. ft. costume shop, a fly tower, two rehearsal halls, and a green room.

“We’re absolutely thrilled to have this remarkable space,” says Hermiston who has been working on the project. “The extraordinary amount of work that has gone into this remarkable theatre, “ says Hermiston who spearheaded the project.

Janmohamed fondly recalls spending the majority of his student life in the Old Auditorium rehearsing, taking masterclasses, performing with the choir, and eating at Yum Yum’s. He has since performed with the Ismaili Muslim Youth Choirs for His Highness the Aga Khan and collaborated on a choral piece for the Dalai Lama.

“History has happened in this building. We often forget that buildings carry cultural memories which in turn can inform and shape our society.”

Janmohamed’s passion for the theatre and concert hall echoed the sentiments of countless others including Professor Nancy Hermiston, Director of the Voice and Opera Division.

“The Old Auditorium allows for a greater flexibility of dynamics and a more intimate experience with the audience,” she says of the mid-sized European style opera house and concert hall. “It’s a new era of opera for the School of Music and Nancy [Hermiston]. It was her dream to rebuild the Old Aud and have a real opera theatre.”

On sitting in one of the 535 plush red velvet seats, an accomplished alumna reflects on seeing current students perform on stage.

“It was just surreal,” says soprano Rhoslyn Jones (BMus ’02, MMus ’04), who has performed major roles with the San Francisco Opera, Pittsburgh Opera, and Vancouver Opera, to name a few. “To me it still feels like home. It’s where I learned how to sing and it feels very comforting and welcoming.”

Having performed around the world, Jones believes there is something truly special about the Old Auditorium.

“The Old Aud allows for a greater flexibility of dynamics and a more intimate experience with the audience,” she says of the mid-sized European style opera house and concert hall. “It’s a new era of opera for the School of Music and Nancy [Hermiston]. It was her dream to rebuild the Old Aud and have a real opera theatre.”

“The revitalization of one of UBC’s oldest buildings represents the University’s living history”

The Old Auditorium is one of UBC’s oldest buildings and with that comes a plethora of memories. From large Psychology 100 classes to alumni couples who first met on the steps of the building, the Old Auditorium houses over 80 years of history. The stage witnessed the rise of stars such as dramatic tenor Ben Heppner (BMus ’79, LL.D ’97), legendary mezzo-soprano Judith Forst (BMus ’65, DLitt ’91), and distinguished theatre and film actress Nicola Cavendish (BA ’77). It also welcomed a range of speakers from noted scientists to a young John Diefenbaker.

“The revitalization of one of UBC’s oldest buildings represents the University’s living history,” says Kurth. “I extend a warm invitation to all alumni who have memories of the Old Auditorium to come and see it in its new glory.”

The renewal of this facility will enable the UBC Opera Ensemble to produce three operas every year, two in the Old Auditorium and one in the Chan Centre for the Performing Arts. In addition to being used for the School’s solo, chamber, and ensemble performances, Kurth also hopes that performing organizations from Vancouver and beyond will use the Old Auditorium to create a thriving community of students and professional artists.

Janmohamed believes that professional training and performance spaces are essential for the development of young artists and community groups.

“A classroom is one thing,” notes Janmohamed. “But a theatre like this is a space where the learning intersects with socio-cultural interactions among artists, audiences and community, enriching the classroom experience.”

“The theatre becomes a memorable place of encounter, discovery, dialogue, and cultural exchange.”

The Old Auditorium renewal project was made possible through the generous support of many individuals and organizations including the Province of British Columbia, University of British Columbia, and its donors.
1. Addition of a 60-member orchestra pit with mechanical lift
   This dramatic addition will accommodate a medium-sized orchestral ensemble. When fully raised, the platform will increase the performance area and further connect the audience with artists on stage.

2. Addition of the structural framework
   Building a steel framework within the original structure of the Old Auditorium ensures seismic upgrades as well as the ability to display theatre and opera sets. While constructing the fly tower, architects maintained the colourful history of the Old Auditorium by preserving decades of student signatures that decorate the backstage walls.

3. Creation of a 2000 sq. ft. costume shop
   The excavation of this large space has provided a proper storage facility for the Opera Ensemble’s extensive costume collection. This will allow the elaborate costumes, many of which were obtained from professional European opera companies, to have many more years of use.

4. Reconfigured lower level
   The creation of two rehearsal halls, a reception area, and an updated green room maintains the social and interactive spirit of the Old Auditorium.

5. Upgraded lighting and control booth
   A second lighting bridge and upgraded technical equipment in the control booth will enhance the quality of productions and contribute to professional learning experiences for students.

Chan Shun Concert Hall
Home to UBC School of Music large ensembles and UBC arts community

Generosity and the spirit of giving to the arts carries on in the largest of the three UBC concert halls: the 1,189 seat Chan Shun Concert Hall located in the Chan Centre for the Performing Arts.

It was their father Chan Shun (1917 – 1997) that inspired brothers Tom and Caleb Chan to make one of the largest private donations to a cultural institution in Canadian history. This gift helped build the Chan Centre for the Performing Arts and establish the Chan Endowment Fund, which supports our opera productions as well as many other local arts organizations and performances.

During the opening ceremony of the Chan Centre in 1997, UBC Public Affairs reported that when Dr. Tom Chan spoke in his father’s absence he said, “it is ‘the worthiness of the cause, not the benefit to the donor’ that is the most important aspect of giving.”

Music and the arts inspired this gift from the Chan family, and created the opportunity for Bing Thom Architects to design the musically-inspired interior, that features a symphony of brass fittings, cables and frets strung from the upper walls accented by white maple soffits and balcony fronts. The unique cello shape of the hall provides a superb and consistent sound experience for audience members, regardless of their seat or the performance they are enjoying.

“It is ‘the worthiness of the cause, not the benefit to the donor’ that is the most important aspect of giving.”

Home to many UBC School of Music large ensembles such as the UBC Symphony Orchestra, and UBC Symphonic Wind Ensemble and Concert Winds, the Chan Shun Concert Hall is a combined achievement in architecture, spirit and community.

It is the vision and generosity of donors that built these venues for music and the arts at UBC. It is from here, where you will see students present their interpretations of great works of music, it is from here where you will watch fully-staged theatre and opera productions, and it is from here where you will hear angelic voices inspired by beatific compositions.

We invite you to our home to see and hear the future of music at these three beautiful halls: the Roy Barnett Recital Hall, Old Auditorium, and Chan Shun Concert Hall.

Spotlight on Opera

The UBC Opera Ensemble toured a very ambitious international schedule this summer and continue their busy performing life into the academic year. After April exams, the ensemble flew to Shanghai and Chengdu to perform four concerts. In June, they presented Mozart’s Die Zauberflöte as the ‘test run’ production for the newly-renovated Old Auditorium. Four sold out houses revealed Vancouver’s appetite for opera and enthusiasm to see the end result of the renovation and restoration of our beautiful historic theatre. We are very excited to reintroduce this cultural space back to UBC and the community with the November production of Mozart’s Don Giovanni.

In July, the Opera Ensemble were in the air again to fly to the Westben Theatre Arts Festival in Ontario, where they presented Die Zauberflöte to three sold out houses. Moving on to Europe, our well-travelled opera ensemble performed six more performances of Die Zauberflöte, including three at the Estate Theatre in Prague, the theatre where Mozart premiered his Don Giovanni!

While in Europe, the UBC Opera Ensemble was joined by UBC Professor Dwight Bennett and Dr. Krzysztof Biernacki, a UBC alumna (DMA ’08) and now Assistant Professor of Voice and Opera at the University of Northern Florida. Students of Biernacki also joined the ensemble. Four performances of La Bohème were given in Usti nad Labem and Hradec Králové. The ensemble and Professor Hermiston were very honoured to have Mrs. Valerie Raymond, Canadian Ambassador to the Czech Republic and the Slovak Republic attending performances of each production. Upon returning to Vancouver the cast of La Bohème joined the Bard himself, Christopher Gaze, at Bard on the Beach for four performances of La Bohème.

This season, a dream came true for the UBC Opera Ensemble as they move back to their new home, the Old Auditorium. Students and faculty look forward to celebrating this grand old theatre with their production of Mozart’s Don Giovanni November 4-7, and again in the summer, with a production of Benjamin Britten’s Albert Herring, June 23-27.

Opera will continue to be presented at the Chan Centre by the UBC School of Music. This season the UBC Opera Ensemble will perform Cendrillon by Jules Massenet at the Chan Centre on February 3-6, 2011.

Beyond the Gates

Conservatory Canada invited professor Jane Coop to give a 2010 Conom/Greger Masterclasses on Friday and Saturday, November 12 & 13, 2010. Coop was a member of the jury for the Hilton Head International Piano Competition in March 2010 and the New York International Piano Competition in June 2010.

Over the summer, Coop enjoyed her 14th year on the faculty of the prestigious Kneisel Hall Chamber Music Festival in Blue Hill Maine, and played concerts with faculty members of the Juilliard School and the New England Conservatory. Coop also participated in the Gros Morne Summer Music Festival in Newfoundland.

Associate Professor David Harding was invited by Philip Glass to join his new group The Glass Chamber Players. The New York Times of Schoenberg’s Glass was recently released on the Orange Mountain Music label.

Retired instruments live on in younger hands

In a chance meeting between Professor Jesse Read and UBC School of Music alumni Henry Lee (BMus ‘93), it came to light that a burgeoning youth orchestra in Medelin, Colombia, situated in the heart of the most vulnerable and deprived area in Central America was in need of instruments. Through their conductor, Mr. Scott Yoo, and the assistance of the Salvi Foundation, and facilitated by the Colombian Embassy and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Read coordinated the donation of instruments from the UBC School of Music to the Red de Orquestas. This collection of woodwind instruments were originally purchased for our Music Department when the Music Building first opened in 1968. Still in good condition, these instruments were repaired and sent to Red de Orquestas in May 2010 to serve a great need in music education for youth in Colombia.

As a member for the Ministry of Foreign Affairs put it simply, “if these young people have an instrument in their hands and music in their hearts, they will have no time for drugs or gangs.”

Closer to home, the School donated three decommissioned upright pianos in August 2010 to the Saint James Music Academy located in the Downtown Eastside. The academy opened in 2007 to offer free music education to children from families of limited means and was embraced enthusiastically by the community. “It was born of the conviction that music gives young people the opportunity to gain self-confidence, get an academic head start, develop good relationships, explore their creative potential, and access a world beyond their immediate surroundings.”

Associate Professor Nathan Hesselin was Artistic Director for the “Korean Folk Percussion in the Twenty-First Century” which included workshops, public lectures, and a performance with Kim Dong Won from South Korea. This two-week intensive programme was jointly presented in January 2010 by the UBC Centre for Asian Studies and the UBC School of Music. Hesselin has been the primary facilitator for the Artistic-Academic Exchange relationship between the UBC School of Music and Wonkwang Digital University (Iksan, South Korea, 2010). Assistant Professor Gene Ramsbottom performed the Mozart Clarinet Concerto with the Terrace Symphony Orchestra (February 2010) and was a guest performer in the Troy University annual Clarinet Day (March 2010). During the summer, he performed at the Music on the Shannon Festival, which was relocated this year to Galway, Ireland.
Professor Nancy Hermiston, Head of the Voice and Opera Division and Director of the UBC Opera Ensemble, was recognized as one of the UBC Killam Teaching Prize Winners for 2009-2010.

Professor Rena Sharon has been selected as a Distinguished Scholar in Residence at the Peter Wall Institute for Advanced Studies for 2010-11.

Professor Emeriti Alan Thresher, currently teaching Chinese Ensemble, received a three-year SSHRC award for research on the Chinese concept of melodic models (qupai), leading to the publication of a monograph on this topic. He presented a keynote address on this subject in April 2010 at the Hong Kong conference Music and Transmission in East Asia.

Assistant Professor Robert Taylor received a grant from the UBC Teaching and Learning Enhancement Fund for his publication Musical Interaction in the Digital Environment: Knowledge Construction in the Advancement of Individual and Ensemble Performance Skills.

On May 26, 2010, Dal Richards, a Vancouver musician with over seven decades of performing, received an honorary doctorate from UBC – Dal Richards is the leader of the Dal Richards Orchestra, which has performed at the Pacific National Exhibition for 70 consecutive years.

Associate Professor Nathan Hesslink presented a paper entitled “Shin Joong Hyun, Rock Music, and Modern Korean Identity” (University of Wisconsin Center for East Asian Studies International Conference “Redefining Korean Identity in Music: Historical and Contemporary Perspectives” Madison, Wisconsin, 2010). Hesslink will also present on Korean rock music at the International Sanjo Festival, New York City (October 2010).

Sessional Lecturer Norman Stanfield (PhD ’08) was invited to York University to deliver a paper and conduct a workshop at a conference entitled “English Country Dancing: in the Past, Dancing into the Future” (June 17-18, 2010). Stanfield also presented the portion of his PhD. research that investigated the transgressive mode of morris dance imposed on country dance.

Assistant Professor Alan Dodson completed an article on aspects of meter in the pianist Ignacy Paderewski’s recordings of Chopin’s Mazurkas. It was published in the Journal of Music Theory 53/1, 2009, 57-94 which came out in the spring of 2010.

Faculty Awards and Research

While on study leave with a Killam Research Fellowship, Professor Michael Tenzer presented his research on Music and Time this year. This included a series of six seminars in Paris at the National Centre for Scientific Research (CNRS) and the School of Advanced Studies in Social Sciences (EHESS). February 2010, he was the keynote speaker at the inaugural conference on Analytical Approaches to World Music, held in Massachusetts. A second conference is planned for 2012 at UBC.

In fall 2010, Tenzer will speak at the International Conference on Traditional Polyphony in Thrásil, Georgia, and at the Society for Ethnomusicology in Los Angeles.

Tenzer and Professor John Roeder are collaborating on a commissioned feature article for the journal Music Theory Spectrum, to appear in 2012. Their co-edited volume, Analytical and Cross-Cultural Studies in World Music is published by Oxford University Press. Tenzer also filled a commission from the journal Circuit for Cultural Studies in World Music, which has performed at the Pacific National Exhibition for 70 consecutive years.

Associate Professor Nathan Hesslink presented a paper entitled “Shin Joong Hyun, Rock Music, and Modern Korean Identity” (University of Wisconsin Center for East Asian Studies International Conference “Redefining Korean Identity in Music: Historical and Contemporary Perspectives” Madison, Wisconsin, 2010). Professor Keith Hamel was at IRCAM, collaborating with the Real-Time Musical Interactions Group (Paris, November/December, 2009). Hamel will also be working with Ensemble Intercontemporanen trombonist Benny Slucho on a new work. In late March 2010, the Hard Rubber Orchestra (big band) premiered a new piece by Hamel at the Vancouver Cultural Olympiad. Francois Houle will travel to New York to perform Hamels work Traces, for clarinet and interactive electronics.

Connect with the Art Music Promotion Agency (AMP) Facebook page for concert details closer to the dates.

AMP is a dynamic new agency designed for the international representation of music and research by composers Keith Hamel, André Ristic, James Harley, Bob Pritchard, Gordon Fitzell, Howard Bashaw, and Paul Stembuizen. Their web site is www.artinmusicpromotion.org.

Senior Instructor Robert Pritchard composed music for What Does A Body Know? for Digital Ventriloquized Actor (DIVA) with soundfiles, it was performed at the New Interfaces for Musical Expression Conference, Sydney, Australia, on June 17 & 18, 2010. Meyrin Cadell wrote the lyrics.

UBC was well represented in the 2010 Western Canadian Music Awards nominations announced this summer. Two nominations included works by Head of Composition, Professor Stephen Chatman. The University Singers’ performance on A Chatman Christmas was nominated for Classical Recording of the Year.

This recording, on the CentreDiscs label, features our premier choral ensemble University Singers conducted by recently-retired professor Bruce Pullan. Other nominees in this category include many UBC alumni. Fringe Percussion for Fringe Percussion, Mark Takeshi McGregor for Different Stones: Canadian Music for Multiple Flutes, and musica intima Into Light.

Included in the nominees for Classical Composition of the Year is Earth Songs composed by Stephen Chatman and performed by the University Singers and CBC Radio Orchestra, which was commissioned by UBC for the University’s 100th anniversary celebration. Vancouver International Song Institute (VISI)

The School of Music hosted the 4th annual Vancouver International Song Institute (VISI) in June, under the Artistic Direction of Rena Sharon, UBC Professor of Collaborative Piano. VISI is an interdisciplinary gathering for performers, poets, composers, directors, and scholars/researchers in music, theatre, humanities, and sciences. Its distinguished 2010 faculty joined us from Juilliard, New England Conservatory, Eastman, Vanderbilt, Duquesne, Cincinnati Conservatory, Centre de la Mélodie Francaise; the Universities of Minnesota, Montreal, Manitoba, Victoria, Toronto, Ryerson, Alberta, and others. UBC Professors Richard Kurth, Terence Dawson, Sima Godfrey, Eric Vatikiotis-Bateson, and Kevin McNelly lent their expertise for three weeks of lectures, masterclasses, and workshops along with many other guest speakers. UBC’s Department of Film and Theatre presented with VISI, under the supervision of Professor Tom Scholte and in collaboration with Craig Holzschuh, and Professors Gayle Shay (Vanderbilt) and David Walsh (U Minnesota), the groundbreaking residency with Professor Cameron Stowe. The program explores new interpretation and performance practices in Art Song Theatre, and featured a performance in June, under the Artistic Direction of Rena Sharon, UBC Professor of Collaborative Piano. A symposium by the Music Therapy Association of BC, a choral Performer Collaboration with the Canadian Music Centre, a residency with Professor Cameron Stowe. VISI 2010 included a Musicology Mentorship, a Composer/ Performer Collaboration with the Canadian Music Centre, a Pedagogy retreat with Rosemarie Landry and François Leroux, a symposium by the Music Therapy Association of BC, a choral workshop, and the SONGFIRE Festival of Song, a coproduction of nine music organizations showcasing 30 concerts across Vancouver. www.songinstitute.ca | www.songfire.ca

Young Artist Experience (YAE)

The Young Artist Experience (YAE) run by School of Music Professor Rena Sharon with UBC colleagues and invited teachers, is a summer chamber music program offering interdisciplinary training for young musicians in Canada. YAE celebrated its 15th anniversary this summer. This session was remarkable for its warm atmosphere of collaboration, for the intense commitment of the students, for the joy of shared play and creativity, and for the exceptional level of musical performance. Renowned young professionals, and celebrated Canadian artists shared impassioned musical collaborations and a bouquet of ideas and activities with 28 YAE students and five Teacher Assistants. The YAE 2010 program included workshops in conflict resolution, drumming, Balinese gamelan ensemble, theatre sports, salsa dance, jazz, and much more! Every exploration was chosen to engage the imagination, expand thought, enhance techniques and empower expression. An all-encompassing journey of emotions and ideas, with an abundance of laughter in the mix. www.youngartistsexperience.ca

UBC Summer Music Institutes

Since 1993 the UBC School of Music Summer Music Institutes have offered high school students and adult learners the opportunity to concentrate on their instruments or voice for up to six hours each day and to interact with UBC Music’s faculty, alumni and undergraduate students.

In the summer of 2010 we welcomed over 230 participants to campus. From Nanke School in Tianan, Taiwan we had 27 students as well as several from Hong Kong and mainland China. Programs are offered in concert band, jazz band, classical strings, and voice. Students can come as “day students” or choose to stay in the fully-supervised dormitory with all meals provided. In addition to being an intensive musical experience there is a wonderful cultural exchange and friendships made.

UBC Summer Music Institutes is Directed by UBC Professor Emeritus Martin Berinbaum. http://summer.music.ubc.ca

National University of the Arts from Taiwan

The Taipei National University of the Arts (TNUA) from Taiwan, was officially recognized as a partner institution to the School of Music in 2007, and this relationship has born a number of fruitful visits, projects and relationships. This summer TNUA sent to British Columbia their Symphonic Wind Ensemble. In preparation, UBC Professor Emeritus Martin Berinbaum worked with the group during a five-week residency in the spring at the Taipei National University of the Arts. Berinbaum worked daily with the high-level ensemble, introducing new repertoire and working on their style and technical performance. Their tour here, including concerts in Vancouver and Abbotsford with Professor Berinbaum conducting, was the culmination of that collaboration. In addition, the ensemble was expanded with UBC student participants, and our clarinet sessional instructor, Gene Ramsbottom, sat in on bass clarinet. Mr. Ramsbottom has also been a guest soloist and masterclass teacher at the university in Taiwan.

A special added aspect of the program this summer was the appearance of Mr. Shien-Ta Su, the most well-known violin soloist in Taiwan, Director of the Music Department and Dean of the Graduate School of Orchestral Instrument Performance at TNUA. He played a brilliant transcription of the famous concerto by Max Bruch to a wildly enthusiastic audience at the Chan Centre.

UBC Professor Jesse Read has twice traveled to Taipei to hold masterclasses on bassoon and play public recitals at TNUA. While there, he discovered the amazing ProArt Ensemble, a large group of bassoonists who have a unique and special history of performing as a bassoon “orchestra”. Combined with various solo instruments, piano, bass and percussion, ProArt performs a repertoire of original and transcribed works for smaller and larger bassoon ensembles. While in Vancouver, they performed with local bassoonists from the Vancouver Symphony; Vancouver Opera, free-lance players, and UBC students and alumni, to form a 38-member ensemble for a concert at the Chan Centre with over 1000 people attending. This special event was called Bassoon Fireworks. In addition to their concerts and activities at UBC, the traveling musicians from TNUA also performed several programs at the Art Gallery in Vancouver, and various other venues in BC, and continued their tour to Calgary and Banff.

We are delighted to have this continuing relationship of exchange and cross-fertilization of our traditions, communities and cultures to enrich and stimulate the musical learning environment at the UBC School of Music.
