Readings for Thirteen Moons

Moon When Acoms Appear
Pomo

When the world was new it was covered with water until Earth Elder, the Creator, reached down to the mud below and placed it up onto Turtle’s back.
Earth Elder shaped
the sun and the stars,
then sat for a moment,
thinking of what was most needed, what would help the humans still to come.

That was when Earth Elder made the first tree,
a great oak with twelve branches arching over the land.
Then, sitting down beneath it,
the sun shining bright, Earth Elder thought
of food for the people, and acorns began to form.

So it is, each year, when the sun shines brightest these first acorns come and our Pomo people gather this moon’s coming harvest.

Moon When Wolves Run Together
Lakota Sioux

Long ago, an old wolf came to that time
when his life on earth
could last no longer.
“My people,” he said,
“you can follow my footsteps when the time comes for you to join me in the skyland.”
Then he left the earth, climbing higher and higher, and each place he stepped the sky filled with stars.

Shunk man-i-tu tan-ka,
we call the wolves,
the powerful spirits
who look like dogs.
When they climb the hills to lift their heads and sing in the road of stars, their songs grow stronger as they join their voices.

So, in this moon, we climb the hills, lift our eyes toward the Wolf Trail and remember that our lives and songs are stronger when we are together.

Baby Bear Moon
Potawatomi

Long ago a small child was lost in the snow.
We thought she had frozen, but when spring came again, she was seen with a mother bear and her small cubs.

She had slept
all through the winter with them, and from then on the bears were her family and her friends.

When we walk by on our snowshoes we will not bother a bear or her babies. Instead we think how those small bears are like our children.
We let them dream together.

Chorale
Music arranged by Ben Ledochowski, lyrics by Elizabeth Forrest

Harvest moon sets in the west.
Acorns fall from towering oak trees, bringing sun, and food well blessed.

Rise to the sky, follow the moonlight.
Lives and songs are intertwined when the trail shines big and bright.

Maple trees strong, peek through the clouds.
Sugar flows throughout the veins within, autumn leaves rustle branches loud.

Dreaming so soft,
quiet and peaceful,
Do not wake the gentle baby bears sleeping soundly and beautiful.
