In this radionovela featuring voices of some of the Bay Area’s most revered actors, Cristina García flash forwards Chekhov’s Three Sisters nearly a hundred years into the future – to Miami, 1985. It's the height of the drug wars and the city is hit with an explosion of cocaine-related violence, a growing AIDS epidemic, and the fallout from 100,000 Marielitos.

Enter the artistic, educated, culturally refined Palacios sisters – Olga, Maria, and Irinita, an ambitious young ballerina recently arrived from Havana. Along with their classical pianist brother, Andres, the Palacios sisters struggle to navigate the fast and furious new rules of Miami, all the while plagued with nostalgia for the island they left behind.
Can the Palacios siblings survive as a family without sacrificing their values? Or will the pressures of exile and the temptations of success ultimately pull them apart?
