COCKTAIL EMPORIUM

AND CRAFT KITCHEN

The History of the Manhattan

One thing we're pretty sure of is that the drink had reared its beautiful head by the 1880s, and we also know that it was one of the very first cocktails that called for vermouth as a modifier. Dear, sweet vermouth. The Manhattan predates other vermouth greats like the Martini, the Martinez, the Rob Roy and the Bobby Burns. It is the king of vermouth drinks.

There's a chance that the Manhattan was invented at the Manhattan Club in New York, and the club's official history makes that claim. According to popular legend, the recipe was created there for a party thrown in 1874 by Jennie Jerome (AKA Lady Randolph Churchill), Winston Churchill's mother. But no matter what anyone tells you—and this story is often seen in print, don't believe it.

As Liquor.com advisor David Wondrich pointed out in his book Imbibe!, Lady Randolph was in England about to give birth to little Winnie at the time she was supposed to be partying in the Big Apple.

The best lead we have on the true birth of the drink is from a story written by William F. Mulhall, a bartender who plied his trade at New York's famed Hoffman House for more than 30 years, starting in the early 1880s. "The Manhattan cocktail was invented by a man named Black, who kept a place ten doors below Houston Street on Broadway in the 1860's, and invented the most famous drink in the world in its time" Mulhall wrote.

Even though Mulhall's account comes decades after the drink appeared on the scene, we do know that the man was a bona fide bartender. And if you can't trust a bartender, who can you trust?

Bourbon

On May 4, 1964, the United States Congress recognized Bourbon Whiskey as a "distinctive product of the United States." The Federal Standards of Identity for Distilled Spirits (27 C.F.R. 5.22) state that bourbon must meet these requirements:

- * Bourbon must be made of a grain mixture that is at least 51% corn (maize).
- * Bourbon must be distilled to no more than 160 (U.S.) proof (80% alcohol by volume).
- * Neither coloring nor flavoring may be added.
- * Bourbon must be aged in new, charred oak barrels.
- * Bourbon must be entered into the barrel at no more than 125 proof (62.5% alcohol by volume).
- * Bourbon, like other whiskeys, may be bottled at not less than 80 proof (40% alcohol by volume.)
- * Bourbon that meets the above requirements and has been aged for a minimum of two years may (but is not required to) be called Straight Bourbon.
- * Straight Bourbon aged for a period less than four years must be labeled with the duration of its aging.
- * If an age is stated on the label, it must be the age of the youngest whiskey in the bottle.
- * Only whiskey produced in the United States can be called bourbon.

American Whiskey

Some key types listed in the U.S. Code of Federal Regulations are:

* Rye whiskey, from mash that consists of at least 51% rye.

* Rye malt whiskey, from mash that consists of at least 51% malted rye.

* Malt whiskey, from mash that consists of at least 51% malted barley.

* Wheat whiskey, from mash that consists of at least 51% wheat.

* Corn whiskey, from mash that consists of at least 80% corn (maize).

* Tennessee whiskey, there are only four brands of Tennessee whiskey that are currently bottled - Jack Daniel's, George Dickel, Benjamin Prichard's, and Collier and McKeel. Three of the four brands that currently produce Tennessee whiskey use a production process that involves a filtering stage called the Lincoln County Process, in which the whiskey is filtered through a thick layer of maple charcoal before it is put into casks for aging. In 2013, Tennessee House Bill 1084 was passed, requiring the Lincoln County process to be used for products produced in the state labeling themselves as "Tennessee Whiskey".

Scotch Whisky

The Scotch Whisky Act of 1988 defines Scotch whisky as:

* Produced at a distillery in Scotland from water and malted barley.

* Distilled at an alcoholic strength by volume of less than 94.8% so that the distillate has an aroma and taste derived from the raw materials.

* Has been matured in Scotland in oak casks of a capacity not exceeding 700 litres, for the period of not less than 3 years.

* Retains the color, aroma and taste derived from the raw materials; and to which no substance other than water and spirit caramel has been added.

* Prohibits the production in Scotland of whisky other than Scotch Whisky.

Irish Whiskey

Irish Whiskey can be summarized as follows:

* Must be distilled and aged on the island of Ireland; that is, either in the Republic of Ireland or Northern Ireland.

* Must be aged for at least three years in wooden casks.

* If the spirits comprise a blend of two or more such distillates, the product is referred to as a "blended" Irish whiskey.

Canadian

According to the laws of Canada, a Canadian whisky must be:

*Mashed, distilled, and aged in Canada.

*It may contain caramel and flavoring in addition to the distilled mash spirits.

*There is no maximum limit on the alcohol level of the distillation, so the bulk of the distilled content (often more than 90 percent) may be neutral spirits rather than straight whiskies.

*It must be aged for at least three years in a wooden barrel of not greater than 700 L capacity, and it must contain at least 40% alcohol by volume.

Japanese

Whisky production in Japan began around 1870, but the first commercial production was in 1924 upon the opening of the country's first distillery, Yamazaki. Broadly speaking the style of Japanese whisky is more similar to that of Scotch whisky than Irish, American, or Canadian styles of whiskey, and thus the spelling typically follows the Scottish convention (omitting the letter "e").

Absinthe

A potent yellowish-green alcoholic drink, technically a gin, originally having high wormwood content. Highly aromatic, this liqueur is dry and somewhat bitter in taste. Wormwood (Artemisia absinthium) is the chief flavoring ingredient; other aromatic ingredients include licorice (which usually predominates in the aroma), hyssop, fennel, angelica root, aniseed, and star aniseed.

Absinthe has often been portrayed as a dangerously addictive psychoactive drug. The chemical compound thujone, although present in the spirit in only trace amounts, was blamed for its alleged harmful effects. By 1915, absinthe had been banned in the United States and in much of Europe. Although absinthe was vilified, it has not been demonstrated to be any more dangerous than ordinary spirits. Recent studies have shown that absinthe's psychoactive properties (apart from that of the alcohol) have been exaggerated.

Absinthe Offerings

Served traditionally with sugar and ice cold water (unless noted)

Vodka

Colorless, distilled liquor of neutral spirits usually made from a grain mash (generally rye or wheat). Potato vodka originated in Russia in the 14th century. Today most vodka is distilled from cereal grains. It is highly neutral, most flavoring substances having been eliminated during distillation and filtration, the latter process employing charcoal purifiers. Distilled water is usually added before bottling in order to lower alcohol content to 40-43% by volume (80-86 proof). Vodka is not aged.

Gin

According to the European Union, gin is legally differentiated into the following four categories:

* Juniper-flavored Spirits: This includes the earliest class of gin, which is produced by pot distilling a fermented grain mash to moderate strength (e.g. 68% ABV), and then re-distilling it with botanicals to extract the aromatic compounds. It must be bottled at a minimum of 30% ABV.

* Gin: This is a juniper-flavored spirit made not via the re-distillation of botanicals, but by simply adding approved natural flavoring substances to a neutral spirit of agricultural origin. The predominant flavor must be juniper.

* Distilled Gin: Distilled gin is produced exclusively by re-distilling ethyl alcohol of agricultural origin with an initial strength of 96% ABV in stills traditionally used for gin, in the presence of juniper berries and of other natural botanicals.

* London Gin: London Gin may not contain added sweetening exceeding 0.1 grams of sugar per liter of the final product, nor colorants, nor any added ingredients other than water. The term London Gin may be supplemented by the term "dry".

Tequila

Usually clear in color and unaged, made from the fermented juice of the Mexican agave plant. It contains 40-50% alcohol. It was developed soon after the Spaniards brought distillation to Mexico, and is named for the town of Tequila. There are 4 types of tequila:

Silver: Un-aged and bottled or stored immediately after distillation, or aged less than two months in stainless steel or neutral oak barrels.

Gold: Un-aged silver tequila that may be flavored with caramel coloring. Could also be the result of blending silver tequila with aged and/or extra-aged tequila.

Reposado: Aged a minimum of two months, but less than a year in oak barrels of any size.

Añejo: Aged a minimum of one year, but less than three years in small oak barrels

Liqueurs and Cordials

Liqueurs, or cordials, are a sweet distilled spirit with sugar contents starting at 2.5 percent, with the sweetest going far beyond that.

These spirits often begin with a base liquor, which could be anything from a neutral grain alcohol to a brandy, whiskey, or rum. Sugar is added to the base along with a mix of herbs, fruits and spices depending on the desired flavor. You will often see liqueurs with a specific flavor profile, such as curacao (orange) or creme de framboise (raspberry). Other liqueurs are more of a blend of flavors, like Campari, Drambuie and Tuaca.
