

Israel Uncovered Alumni

Win President and Vice President of Student Government

At University of Cincinnati, two non-Jewish Israel Uncovered alumni Mitchell Phelps and Brooke Duncan ran for President and Vice-President respectively. Though they were acquainted on campus through their respective communities, Mitchell and Brooke solidified their friendship and their plan to run together for student government while on Israel Uncovered. Since their return from the trip they have been extremely involved in the Israel and Jewish communities on campus, including Hillel. Brooke attended AIPAC with Hillel. Her and Mitchell attend many Israel events on campus together, and have been planning events to bring different campus communities together around the Israel conversation.

About his Israel Uncovered experience, Mitchell says,

“I really knew nothing about Israel, but when I really started talking to some of the Israel advocates and members of The David Project, asking questions, seeing what their experiences were like, and speaking to Israelis, I was able to see that Israel Uncovered would be an experience I would be able to dive into. I could learn a lot that would add value to myself, personally, and my campus community that I lead as a student.”

Filip Jotevski, another Israel Uncovered alum at University of Cincinnati, was interested in forming a Macedonian Club on campus but was struggling to get the club recognized by Student Government. Brooke helped Filip to get his club recognized and running after returning from Israel Uncovered. The Macedonian Club is an influential student group at University of Cincinnati and now an ally for the Israel community on campus.
