Open Your Life to Adoption. Open Your Life to Courtney.

This sweet 11 year old is Courtney. She is smart, personable, very friendly and is a great communicator. She likes animals, attending church, drawing and riding her bike. Courtney is very much a girly girl and enjoys getting dressed up when the occasion arises.

Courtney has experienced a lot during her life and needs a forever home that can provide her with a family who is nurturing, full of love, patience and dedication. Her ideal forever family will be able to provide her with the individual attention she needs and deserves. Her worker feels she will be the most successful in a home where she is the youngest child.

FrameWorks Family Stories

FrameWorks staff had the pleasure of interviewing five West Virginia foster/adoptive families. We shared the Family Stories page on our website last month and since then we have added video interviews from a few more families, including the Saidi family seen in the image above. We think these videos will inspire you and we hope that you share them with others.

Visit <https://www.missionwv.org/family-stories/> to view interviews of four of the five families and visit again soon to learn more from the Parsons family about why Cynthia, a single mother at the time, decided to open her life to kids in foster care.

Volunteers are needed to share the urgency for more foster and adoptive parents in West Virginia!

We are looking for volunteers to help recruit foster and adoptive parents throughout the state. We are looking for individuals with knowledge of the foster care system who can help us navigate recruitment efforts in their communities. For example, you could:

- Attend an event as a guest speaker.
- Help to obtain media coverage of foster care needs in your area.
- Hold a drive in your community to collect care packages for youth in foster care.
- Host an information booth at your local county fair or other event in your area.

- Hand out flyers at local sporting events.

We can supply recruitment materials and guidance on messaging. If you are interested in volunteering, please email Rachel Kinder or call 304-562-0723.
