Emily Henderson was born and raised in Wellfleet. She graduated from UMass Amherst with the plan of being an elementary school teacher. After living and teaching in Wilmington, North Carolina for a few years, she moved to Aspen, CO to be a ski bum for one winter (which turned into a few years!). While working at a busy restaurant at the base of a mountain, she met folks from all over the world which inspired her to get out and do some traveling. She was fortunate enough to waitress in the summers on Cape Cod and travel during the winters for a few years. While she traveled around the world, she was inspired to learn more about community development focused careers. She was introduced to the fine folks at Wellfleet Preservation Hall where she has now worked for almost 7 years! What she loves about the Hall is that it provides a space for folks to gather in so many different capacities. When Emily is not at work, she loves to read, go to the beach, spend time with her family & friends and attempt to paint.
