MULLOWAY TAGGING UNDERWAY IN NSW

ANSA NSW has commenced tagging mulloway in NSW under a pilot project that will provide data on growth and the movement details of these iconic fish.

In conjunction with NSW Fisheries ANSA NSW is managing the project and has selected a team of prominent mulloway anglers who will participate with the hopes of tagging upto 1000 fish all over NSW from our estuaries, bays and harbours to rivers and inshore and offshore locations.

With tags already going into fish we are encouraging anglers who capture tagged fish to record tag numbers, measure the fish and release it again hopefully giving us even more access to data though these re-released fish.

If you do catch the fish of a lifetime that is tagged please ensure you record the length, weight and return the details as per the instructions on the tag.

Also keep in mind that as part of the mulloway research angler program, Julian Hughes is also collecting heads and frames of mulloway. More details are available below
