Archer hotel, New York

Located in Manhattan's Garment District, on 38th Street, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues, Archer New York opened its doors in May this year. Its 180 bedrooms, a rooftop bar and a restaurant are spread across 22 floors, with the neighbourhood's heritage reflected in the design. The hotel's architect and designer, Glen Coben of Glen and Company, has incorporated industrial features such as exposed brick, steel and butcher-block tiled flooring throughout the building and has used locally sourced materials and custom-designed furniture. A quartet of room designs provides a welcome touch of variety.
