Migraine can affect virtually every part of the body. Migraine is a whole-body disease. Migraine disease affects every person, and every body, differently.