“The Museum of Fine Arts is strengthened as an organization due to partnerships with strong groups like Sociedad Latina. Sociedad Latina is one of the most active organizations in the Mission Hill Partnership and together we’ve successfully brought new programming to our shared community. We look forward to many more years of working together.”

TO OUR FRIENDS, PARTNERS & SUPPORTERS:

On behalf of Sociedad Latina’s Board, staff, youth and families, we are pleased to share our 2016 annual report, “Developing Latino Leaders—Desarrollando Líderes Latinos.” It outlines the innovations and impact that we’ve made over the last year, including holistic college and career readiness strategies to guide youth towards postsecondary success, new youth organizing campaigns to advocate for higher quality education across the city, and neighborhood-based arts and cultural programming to engage more youth and families. These programs respond directly to the most pressing needs of Boston’s young Latinos, who contend with many obstacles to earning a high school diploma, pursuing postsecondary college and career pathways, becoming leaders in the community and accessing the arts.

In the face of these challenges, our youth and families are resilient, hardworking and committed to breaking down the barriers that stand in the way of their success and the success of their peers. Sociedad Latina’s alumni are proof of this dedication and determination. In this report, we share the accomplishments of two of our alumni—Ricardo and Margarita—since their time as Youth Leaders. We’re proud to say that they truly embody Sociedad Latina’s mission and represent Boston’s next generation of Latino leaders. We also look ahead with the next generation of alumni who are currently in our middle school STEAM Team program. They have high aspirations and big dreams!

As we look back at the last year, we are especially grateful for the support of our funders, donors, partners, volunteers and friends. Without you, we would not be able to connect thousands of Latino youth and families with high quality, year-round programming that celebrates their assets, cultures and contributions to the community. Thank you and we hope for your continued support in the year to come.

Best,

Alexandra Oliver-Dávila

MISSION & MODEL

Founded in 1968, Sociedad Latina promotes Latino leadership and creates a Boston community that supports youth success through our holistic “Pathways to Success” positive youth development model. We provide young people ages 11-21 with ongoing training and support to develop their leadership skills and offer real-life opportunities to put their learning into practice. Moreover, the model serves as a structure to motivate and empower youth to map their own progress towards college, career and community leadership.

Through Pathways to Success, we connect youth to ten years of intensive, free, year-round programming that uses culturally and linguistically responsive and sustaining practices to capitalize on strengths and assets, such as bilingualism, high aspirations, resiliency and strong family and community ties. Our approach works in partnership with families and a wide network of cross-sector partners to build young people’s skills and knowledge in the following areas:

- Education: Supports youth and their families on the journey from middle school through high school and on to college, with expertise in working with English learners.
- Civic Engagement: Elevates grassroots Latino leadership on issues affecting youth lives and opportunities, such as education reform, health inequity and community building.
- Workforce Development: Prepares youth for careers in robust fields where Latinos are underrepresented, including healthcare, public service, the arts, STEM and entrepreneurship.
- Arts & Culture: Offers high-quality opportunities to create and experience art in a range of artistic disciplines, with a focus on Latino cultural traditions.

PATHWAYS TO SUCCESS MODEL
DEFINING THE OPPORTUNITY

THE CHALLENGE

From 2000 to 2013, Latinos accounted for 68% of the population growth in Boston and now represent 19% of the population. Unfortunately, they remain under-represented in college, high-paying careers, government and the arts.

Boston’s Latino population is especially youthful. In 2013, 32% of Latinos were age 19 or younger, compared to only 9.5% of non-Latinos. Latino students also represent 42% of the student body in Boston Public Schools.

7% of executive positions and board/commission appointments in city government are held by Latinos.

46% of residents feel that there are not enough culturally relevant, accessible arts activities in their neighborhood.

OUR STRATEGIES

1. Capitalize on youth and family assets, including bilingualism, high aspirations and strong community ties.

2. Make holistic investments in youth and families, partnering from grade 6 through the first two years of college or career.

3. Affirm positive cultural identities that build resiliency and continue Latino cultural traditions in our community.

4. Elevate youth voice in decision-making processes that affect their lives, opportunities and communities.

5. Support the development of social-emotional skills that foster youth leadership and long-term success.

6. Provide flexible pathways that ensure all youth graduate from high school with the next steps that are right for them.

7. Engage families across the organization, recognizing that they are the single most important factor in youth success.

RICARDO
Alumni Leadership on The National Stage

In 2006, fourteen-year-old Ricardo got his first job—as a Youth Community Organizer at Sociedad Latina. His family was always very active in the community and they wanted him to do something meaningful. So for the next few years, he grabbed a clipboard and knocked on doors across Boston to organize for healthier and stronger communities with Sociedad Latina.

During Ricardo’s time as a Youth Community Organizer, he worked on the Boston Tobacco Advisory Project (a city-wide initiative with the Boston Public Health Commission to determine if tobacco advertising was targeting youth) and organized Mission Hill residents to push for equitable community development. Through these campaigns, he conducted surveys and needs assessments, created documentaries and crafted platforms, and advocated for change in front of public officials and decision-making bodies. His favorite memory is coming together at the end of each year to celebrate successes: “It was always really fun. And a chance for us to see different youth present their work and learn more about what they were working on.”

Ricardo credits Sociedad Latina with getting him to “think about college at a young age and understand the importance of building a resume.” He explains that “[Being a Youth Community Organizer] helped me to stand out – it was different than most people’s first job. I wouldn’t have started thinking about college so soon unless I was at Sociedad Latina. After that, everything was about that next step.” His early planning paid off. After graduating from high school in 2010, Ricardo attended Boston College and continued to pursue his passion for politics, public service and public health. He was involved in several political campaigns and interned with Harvard School of Public Health and the Equal Justice Coalition.

With his strong work ethic and impressive resume, Ricardo has continued to find success in his career after college. Last year, he was hired to work for Senator Elizabeth Warren in her Washington D.C. office. In this role, he still uses his experience as a Youth Community Organizer:

“Organizing showed me the potential for policy change to impact people’s lives for the better. I never expected to be doing anything related to politics while I was working at Sociedad Latina. But the impact of the experience of working in the community and talking to people out in the streets has been huge for me in my career.”

Despite demographic shifts, Latinos are still under-represented in education, business, government and other sectors. In light of these challenges facing the Latino community in Boston and beyond, Ricardo argues that we need strong Latino leaders who can organize support and influence decisions. He says that’s why it’s critical for Latino youth to become leaders “so we can speak with a unified voice and advocate for our community’s best interests. As leaders, we have a seat at the table.”

Ricardo isn’t exactly sure what he’ll doing in another ten years, but he knows he’ll be making an impact on the Boston community and getting more Latinos engaged in public life. “For me, more than anything, leadership is giving a voice to your community and getting out there to make a positive change.”

“I never realized the impact that Sociedad Latina would have on me well into adulthood.”
MARGARITA

Leading The Way For Healthier Communities

Margarita joined Sociedad Latina in 2000 as a sophomore in high school. Originally from Dorchester, she knew she wanted to pursue a career in the health sector, but wasn’t sure where to start. Then, her mother recommended Sociedad Latina because she heard that we would help her pursue her postsecondary goals while exploring Latino culture and identity. After learning about our different programs, Margarita decided to join Jóvenes Latinos Pro Salud (Health Careers for Youth) to get hands-on work experience at a Longwood Medical Area hospital. Reflecting on this decision, she says “I never realized the impact that Sociedad Latina would have on me well into adulthood.”

Through the Jóvenes Latinos Pro Salud program, Margarita interned at Brigham and Women’s Hospital, located down the street from Sociedad Latina. She had the opportunity to learn about the different roles on each unit and was connected to a health professional as a mentor. Margarita credits this robust experience, as well as Sociedad Latina’s college access supports, with her acceptance to Simmons College: “Sociedad Latina was always a place to come to for guidance. The organization invested in the youth and there was a level of commitment amongst the staff that allowed us to be set-up for success.”

After three years as a Youth Leader, Margarita was ready for college and decided to major in Sociology of Health and minor in Biology at Simmons. Because Margarita was such a dynamic Youth Leader who was a role model for her peers, we hired her to work part-time while she pursued her undergraduate degree. She used her first-hand experience to lead work readiness trainings for younger Youth Leaders and to be a support system for those who wanted to follow her example of pursuing a health college and career pathway.

Over the last ten years, Margarita’s career trajectory has been impressive. She received her Master’s degree in Public Administration from Simmons College and began working with the Massachusetts Department of Public Health. Her experience with youth has been a huge asset, as she was tasked with creating a guide for HIV+ youth, their caregivers and providers that is a resource across the country. Margarita’s commitment to improving the health of her community makes her a true leader within the Sociedad Latina family.

“Sociedad Latina provides a safe space for young people and families to ask questions about health. We teach them how to make healthier choices, and also encourage them to advocate for their wellbeing.”

– Ornan M., Alumnus and Program Assistant

“Sociedad Latina provee un espacio seguro para que jóvenes y familias puedan hacer preguntas acerca de la salud. Les enseñamos cómo tomar decisiones más saludables y los incentivamos a abogar por su bienestar.”

“STEAM Team showed me how important it is to work together.”
Sociedad Latina is incredibly proud of our Alumni when they find success after leaving our programs, but it’s also a very special time when young people first join us and start to explore their interests, define their goals and become active in the community. Three of the seventh graders in our middle school STEAM Team program—Gleisy R., Masiel D. and Ramyus P.—are already becoming the next generation of young Latino leaders in Boston. STEAM integrates the arts into the traditional STEM disciplines of science, technology, engineering and mathematics.

Gleisy joined STEAM Team in the fall, having emigrated from the Dominican Republic to Boston with her family over the summer. Her mother encouraged her to look for an afterschool program that would help her make friends, learn new things and practice her English. Because Gleisy wants to become a pediatrician when she’s older, she decided to join STEAM Team and tackle some hands-on science and technology projects. Gleisy explains “I want to make kids feel better, so I need to get really good at science.” She quickly befriended Masiel, a fellow native Spanish speaker who has been in STEAM Team since grade 6. Masiel wants to be an engineer because “I like finding solutions to everyday problems, inventing new products and thinking about how to change the city for the better.” Ramyus also joined STEAM Team in grade 6 and he wants to have a career in architecture. STEAM Team is a great fit for him because he loves math, engineering and design!

Ramyus has a long list of favorite projects from STEAM Team—like building a marshmallow “slingshot” and making a miniature boat that can still float with 200 marbles on it—but he says that the biggest impact of the program has been on his leadership and teamwork skills. He explains, “I used to be shy and I didn’t want to participate in group projects. STEAM Team helped me feel more comfortable around other people and showed me how important it is to work together.” Now Ramyus is excited to help new STEAM Team members when they join the program and he encourages them to work hard towards their goals. For his willingness to learn and go above-and-beyond, Ramyus was selected for an “Exemplifying Values” award during our 2016 Family Dinner.

Similarly, Gleisy and Masiel love the hands-on STEAM projects that they get to work on with Sociedad Latina, but say that they most appreciate the opportunity to learn English in a space that celebrates Latino heritage and other cultures. Masiel explains, “When I first came to Boston, I had a difficult time with English. But in STEAM Team, they support me and answer any questions that I have in English and Spanish. Now, I can understand the topics that I’m learning in my math and science classes.”

These young people are leaders among their peers and have already shown a commitment to their education and the resiliency to persevere through difficult times. With these qualities and skills, we look forward to partnering with them and their families through high school, college and on to fulfilling STEM careers!

OUTCOMES

6. State Representative Jeff Sanchez spoke about the importance of voting.
7. Headliner Eric German y Su Orquesta brought the crowd to their feet with tropical Latin sounds.
On September 15, Sociedad Latina hosted our annual Latino Heritage Month kickoff event ¡Viva Nuestra Cultura!, featuring live music, dance lessons, art-making opportunities and a youth talent show in the heart of our Mission Hill neighborhood. Local families, artists, community leaders, businesses and elected officials attended the event, located at One Brigham Circle, which also served to highlight Latino civic engagement and voter registration efforts.

“It’s a pleasure to join Sociedad Latina and the entire community to celebrate Latino Heritage Month,” said State Representative Jeffrey Sánchez. “Events like these help display the many positive ways Latinos contribute to Boston’s arts, culture and business communities.”

During the event, which also serves as our annual meeting, Board members shared the organization’s accomplishments and were elected by the community for a new year of service.
