Chinatown Chow:
A Guide to Boston's Chinatown Restaurants

This brochure was a community initiative brought to life by High School youth in Asian Community Development Corporation’s Youth Program, A-VOYCE.
Asian Voices of Organized Youth for Community Empowerment (A-VOYCE) is ACDC’s dynamic leadership program for youth from Greater Boston. A-VOYCE brings youth together to use their voices in affecting positive change in the community through the power of dialogue, storytelling and placemaking. “Chinatown Chow” is brought to you by A-VOYCE Tier 2, a small cohort of five highschool students. Brought together by our Asian backgrounds, our own unique experiences allowed for thought provoking conversations regarding community needs. Our personal stories also contributed greatly to the creation of “Chinatown Chow.”

The COVID-19 pandemic created stigma and hatred around Asian people, especially because of the pandemic originating in China. Many people have lost business either from the economic shutdowns or the fear. In addition, for all the youth at A-VOYCE and people of Chinatown, this place is where many of us work, play, and eat. Many of us grew up eating at these restaurants in Chinatown and we want to be able to see them continue to thrive and be successful.

“Chinatown Chow” seeks to highlight the importance of culture and food in bringing together community. This project is dedicated to the many local bakeries, eateries and restaurants of Boston’s Chinatown, in an effort to uplift and support our community members during these uncertain times. We invite you - our friends, family, community members and more - to join us in financially supporting Chinatown’s local businesses, and to show up and show out for a community that means so much to us all. The brochure itself contains: some of our favorite food spots, youth reviews and recommendations, a non-conclusive restaurant index, an interactive word search, and some recommend next steps for all of us both during and post COVID-19.
