Protecting Human Rights Defenders at Risk

Edited by Alice M. Nah

Series: Routledge Studies in Human Rights

This book assesses the construction, operation and effects of the international protection regime for human rights defenders, which has evolved significantly over the last twenty years in response to the risks people face as they promote and protect human rights. The volume draws upon the experiences of human rights defenders who continue to persevere in their activism in Indonesia, Egypt, Kenya, Mexico and Colombia. This book will be a thought-provoking guide for students and scholars of politics, international relations, law and human rights, as well as to practitioners engaged in the protection of human rights defenders at risk.

Reviews

"... [This] is a book that will make major contributions to the efficacy and strength of movements for justice." -- Margaret L. Satterthwaite, NYU School of Law, USA

"This welcome and timely volume... draws valuable lessons from the experiences of hundreds of human rights defenders in Colombia, Egypt, Indonesia, Kenya and Mexico about how defenders survive at the local level and what help might be had from the international community." -- Neil Mitchell, University College London, United Kingdom

"... This is a critical contribution for those interested in the realities of human rights struggles around the world." -- Ulisses Terto Neto, State University of Goiás, Brazil

"... This is a must read for those who want to know more about how human rights defenders around the globe navigate risks and how they should be better protected." -- Sriprapha Petcharamesree, Mahidol University, Thailand
