ReFrame Rise
2022–2024
Elevating Directors and Cinematographers
ReFrame Rise

Presented in partnership with NETFLIX Creative Equity Fund

ReFrame Rise™ is a comprehensive and customized two-year program designed by ReFrame, a Women in Film and Sundance Institute collaboration, to accelerate high-level, sustainable advancement for mid-career talent.

Building upon the successes of the first ReFrame Rise™ class, launched in 2019, ReFrame is expanding the program to support cinematographers as well as directors. Through applying Rise’s sponsorship-driven career acceleration model - which has proven to be successful for directors - to the inaugural group of DPs, ReFrame aims to demonstrate a commitment to developing both above and below-the-line talent, and the urgent need for a cross-industry investment in these roles in which women remain underrepresented.

We are very excited to support this supremely talented cohort of Directors and Cinematographers as a partnership between Women in Film and the Sundance Institute’s Women at Sundance Program. We have learned firsthand the value of the sponsorship opportunity for women artists and look forward to supporting this next group as they level up and find sustainability in their careers.

Ally Pankiw is a writer/director who works in TV, film, and branded. Ally’s accomplishments in TV include directing and executive producing the first season of the Netflix comedy series, Feel Good, starring Mae Martin and Lisa Kudrow, and blocks of episodes on Hulu’s Shrill and The Great.

Ally recently completed her first feature film, a dark dramedy which she wrote and directed, called I Used To Be Funny. It stars Rachel Sennott (Shiva Baby, Bodies Bodies Bodies) and Jason Jones (The Daily Show, The Detour). Her short films have played international film festivals and in 2018 she was selected for Film Independent’s Directing Lab with her feature, The Hiding House.

Previously, Ally served as a writer on Schitt’s Creek, and she is now developing an original comedy series with its star and creator, Dan Levy, for Hulu and 20th Century Fox Animation. The duo are also co-writing a feature for Universal Pictures. Ally has previously directed two digital series for the CBC, called An Awkward Girl Dates and Terrific Women. And she has directed commercials for brands like Amazon, adidas, Pepsi, Chanel and Nylon, and music videos for artists like Phoebe Bridgers, MUNA, Janelle Monae, and Lil Jon.

Angel Kristi Williams is an award winning filmmaker born and raised in West Baltimore, Maryland. She was 8 years old when her late father gave her a VHS camcorder which sparked her love for the medium. After studying visual art, photography and experimental film, Angel developed a voice that embraces silence and the power of the image to tell a story.

Her feature directorial debut Really Love, produced by MACRO, won the Special Jury Recognition for Acting for co-stars Kofi Siriboe and Yootha Wong-Loi-Sing at SXSW. The film then played as part of AFI Fest’s Special Presentations to much acclaim. Angel is a Sundance Institute Momentum Fellow as well as a Film Independent Project Involve Directing Fellow, where she was the recipient of their Sony Pictures Diversity Fellowship. Angel won an NAACP Image Award for directing Colin in Black and White, her first episode of television. She directed an episode of Naomi for CW and will later helm the season 2 opener of Cherish the Day for OWN.

She splits her time between Baltimore and Los Angeles and holds an MFA in Directing from Columbia College Chicago.

Ekwa Msangi’s acclaimed feature Farewell Amor won the 2020 Sundance Amazon Producer’s Award, the NYWIFT Directing Award and Best Screenplay at the Durban International Film Festival, and earned the director herself the Independent Spirit Award for Someone to Watch in 2021. Farewell Amor was bought for distribution by IFC Films for North America, MUBI and Netflix for Worldwide. Having written and directed for multiple drama series in Kenya, including The Agency, MNET’s first-ever original hour-long Kenyan drama series, Ekwa was also a 2020 Sundance Momentum Fellow and 2020 BAFTA Breakthrough artist recipient. Ekwa has taught Screenwriting at The New School and Feirstein Graduate School of Cinema, and at the Vermont College of Fine Arts. One of Ekwa’s key goals as an artist is to transform our society’s images and relationships with African cultures, and to empower African filmmakers in telling their stories.

Yoko Okumura is a genre-fluid writer, director, and performer. Born in a Buddhist temple in Japan and raised in the frostbite of Minneapolis, she now lives and works in Los Angeles. She is obsessed with telling rebellious stories through underrepresented perspectives and thrives in the intersection of grit and glamor.

Yoko is currently in post for her directorial debut feature for Blumhouse and Epix. The thriller titled Unseen stars Jolene Purdy (The White Lotus, Wandavision) and Midori Francis (Dash & Lily, The Sex Lives of College Girls).

She also sold a story pitch to Sam Raimi’s Quibi/Roku horror anthology 50 States of Fright and directed the episode titled “America’s Largest Ball of Twine” starring Ming-Na Wen (The Mandalorian) and Karen Allen (Raiders of the Lost Ark).

She has also directed episodes of the one hour drama Good Trouble and a block of two episodes for The Bold Type.
Ava Benjamin Shorr is a Los Angeles-based director of photography. Raised in Portland, Oregon, her early curiosity about film emerged from the rough-hewn style of skateboarding videos of the mid-nineties coupled with a fascination with art-house cinema.

By drawing upon experimental photographic techniques and her own memories, Ava uses an innate sense of light to shape emotion, enrich stories, and create new kinds of moving images. But her work is guided most of all by a deep appreciation for the poetics of the human face and a drive to showcase authentic perspectives.

Some of her most lauded work includes Disclosure, which premiered at Sundance in 2020 and was released by Netflix, Framing Agnes, which won multiple awards at Sundance in 2022, and Equal, a four-part series she shot for HBO Max.

Ava was included on a list of “Mind Blowing Women Cinematographers” by actor and director Emmy Rossum and was awarded an ASC Vision Mentorship with Rachel Morrison, cinematographer of Black Panther and Mudbound. She was also the subject, and co-DP of the documentary short Ava & Bianca, about her special connection to fellow trans cinematographer Bianca Cline. Ava & Bianca premiered on Nowness and is currently screening on the festival circuit.
