INTREPID SOJOURNER ANNOUNCES OPENING STAFF

DENVER, CO (May 11, 2017) — The Intrepid Sojourner Beer Project™ has hired its opening staff to serve customers at its tasting room at 925 W 8th Ave. in Denver's Art District on Santa Fe.

“This is a great group with considerable experience from some fantastic local breweries. We’ve been blown away by how incredibly knowledgeable about beer they are, and they’ve been loving getting to know Intrepid Sojourner’s brews so they can talk about them with the public,” said taproom manager Kevin McCrossin, who brings experience to Intrepid Sojourner from a similar role at Golden’s Cannonball Creek. “We’re lucky to have found people on the same page as us about the importance of the customer experience and as passionate about the story of beer as we are.”

Kyle Freeman, who has been in Colorado since childhood, has a data science background and comes most recently from Tivoli. Colorado Native Chris Frierhood comes from Deep Draft and works on his own educational startup. Chad Ickes joins after a stint at Brian Common, his first Denver beer stop after working at a craft beer bar in Columbus, Ohio. Sarah Lawrence brings experience as a local art-gallery event coordinator and has experience working at and starting restaurants in her native Boston.

Gates Minis, from Savannah, Ga., worked at Fiction Beer Co. for its first two years of operations and has experience at River North Brewing and First Draft, as well as several years of volunteer experience at GABF. Joey Seaman worked at Firestone Walker in Southern California before relocating to Colorado. Ft. Wayne, Ind., native Savannah Snyder brings a graphic design background and experience serving at the Mountain Sun family of establishments.

“I’m pumped about this group. Training has gone fantastically well,” said company partner Nick Fredman.

The Intrepid Sojourner Beer Project opens to the public May 20 and will serve brews inspired by flavors from around the world.
