SCIENCE, NOT SILENCE

We as scientists, students, teachers, doctors, engineers, and concerned citizens have chosen to March for Science to bring attention to important issues that we see as threatening the safety of our fellow citizens, our state, our national character, and the endeavor of scientific exploration.

WE DEMAND that our leaders take into account the best available scientific evidence when making their decisions, in particular in the areas of climate change, healthcare, energy policy, public safety, education, and resource management.

WE DEMAND that the right to speech, travel, and association be protected to the fullest extent, in keeping with the highest ideals and traditions of the United States. Scientific study requires open exchange of ideas and free association across ethnic, religious, and national lines.

WE DEMAND that public education be protected and strengthened, to provide for our next generation of scientists, engineers, and innovators, as well as for our future artists, writers, and musicians, whose contributions are equally critical for a healthy democracy.

WEAR GREEN in recognition of Earth Day and the threat of climate change which motivates many of us to march!
