

INSIDENewYork

by KATHY NOVAK

Everyday I see visitors to New York traversing the big avenues and smaller side streets trying to take the perfect photograph to show the folks back home. If you're looking for some great images of the City, take a trip up to The International Center of Photography (1130 Fifth Ave. @ 94th St.), where there are currently two poignant displays. One focuses on the legendary photo documentaries of Walker Evans. You may recall his indelible images of American Depression-era times in James Agee's Let Us Now Praise Famous Men. Also on view are visions of Brooklyn in a show called Intimate City: The Photography of Thomas Roma—some sweet moments are captured such as this little girl in Come Sunday, a study of African American churches. Call the ICP at 860-1777 for hours and more information.
