

Conservation + Land Management course ...

Lots of photo opportunities and so many species to try to commit to memory, wonderful to have regular practice, not to mention access to so much knowledge.

Monitoring, recording and plant ID ... you'd be amazed what's under your feet if you're not looking out. Discovery on hands and knees was often in order.

Learning from those in the field was often exchanged for assistance with planting, monitoring and/or weeding.

I couldn't always attend classes, and I didn't attempt the assessments, but I had such a good time, learnt so much and boggled my brain in new and different ways as a result of participating in this course.

Disclaimer: I also work for this tafe and the teacher is both my friend and boss. But I'm telling you about the course because I got so much out of it (I've been wanting to do it for nearly a decade!), not particularly to "push" it. Just in case you were wondering.
