Sexual Harassment Prevention

AB 1825's sexual harassment training requirements apply to organizations that regularly employ 50 or more employees, or regularly "receive the services of" 50 or more persons. (Independent contractors and temps are included in the 50+ number.) Employers must provide two hours of training to each supervisory employee, every two years. New supervisory employees must receive sexual harassment training within six months of their assumption of a supervisory position, and thereafter, every two years.
