Open Data

On March 17, 2011, the Government of Canada launched an Open Data portal. As part of that effort, statistical data and other information on Canada’s international assistance and the former Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) activities are available in data sets and machine-readable formats for researchers, students, media or anyone interested in international assistance. Each data set has its own definitions and they are not often comparable — please review the data field definitions carefully before downloading the data sets. Links to related reports and other data sources are also provided.

- Understanding the data
- Licence
- Understanding international assistance terms
- Data field definitions

Project Browser Data Set

Information from the International Development Project Browser is available in a research-friendly data set, and continues to be available through individual project profiles in the Project Browser itself.

International Aid Transparency Initiative (IATI)

The former CIDA’s agency-level and activity-level data compatible with the IATI Standard.

Statistical Report on International Assistance - by Country Spending

Canada’s country spending data from this report is now available in a database-friendly format broken down by channel and recipient, per fiscal year.

Statistical Report on International Assistance - by Multilateral Organization

The former CIDA’s aid spending by multilateral organization broken down by fiscal year, project, and organization type is now available in a database-friendly format.
Development for Results

Annual reports on the results of DFATD's work, including statistics and stories that represent real, sustainable, concrete results.

- Canada's Development Program at a Glance 2013-2014
- Development for Results 2011-2012

Statistical Reports on International Assistance

These reports present an annual comprehensive and detailed account of Canadian International Assistance.

- Statistical Reports on International Assistance 2011–2012

Departmental Performance Report

The DPR describes the department's performance against the priorities listed in the previous Report on Plans and Priorities, highlighting Canada's engagement in the developing world.

Report on Official Development Assistance

This report meets the reporting requirements of the Official Development Assistance Accountability Act. Canada’s ODA plays a critical role in improving the lives of those most in need around the world.
