Field of Interest Fund

Through a field of interest fund, you can identify and support a broad or specific charitable purpose, issue, or geographic area. Our staff identifies organizations with proven impact and makes grants to the nonprofits that best fit your interests.

The Community Foundation offers several options for addressing your interests through a field of interest fund:

- CO-INVEST with other donors in an existing field of interest fund. Your gift of any size will increase the total amount available for grants.
- CREATE YOUR OWN named field of interest fund. Following your statement of purpose, The Community Foundation will identify organizations with proven impact and distribute grants to the nonprofits that best fit your interests.
- ENDOW your field of interest fund to provide perpetual support in the area you name, even as needs and conditions evolve over time.

SPRING CREEK ENVIRONMENTAL & PRESERVATION FUND

The donors who established the Spring Creek Fund cared deeply about the environment but had reached an age where they no longer wanted to actively manage their family foundation. That’s when they turned to The Community Foundation.

Terminating the foundation into a field of interest fund at The Community Foundation was a simple process and the donors were glad to be able to maintain anonymity. Most important, they know that The Community Foundation will continue the work that they had begun to preserve, protect, and encourage sustainable use of exceptional natural or built environments in the Greater Washington region, particularly those environments affecting low-income populations.
