Sir,

In consequence of an uninterrupted motion to this family and the smallness of my house, it will be inconvenient for one to accommodate Master George and Lawrence any longer than their quarters amount. I should have changed my house in order to accommodate them but find it would not suit them and one, I am under the necessity of being often out. Then they like other boys will do as they please. Again my desire to do as much attention to their clothes as I could wish, and they are very rational in themselves. Only think of them being totally without shirts for four or five months after they came to live with me. I think they could dispose of them in some improper manner or they could...
Mr. Madison is on his way from New York. I have the honor to be

Your Excellencies,

Much obliged and

very humble

Alex. Meade

Max. March 6th 1790

The Excellency Gen. Washington