

Benjamin is an energetic and motivated Horn player based in London and Birmingham. Performing freelance in many Orchestras across the UK, and across the world with The Lumos Wind Quintet, he has a wide range of playing experience, from symphonic repertoire, to workshops in quiet American towns.

Currently in his final year at the Royal Birmingham Conservatoire, Benjamin's notable playing includes played alongside the City Of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra as part of their side-by-side scheme, under conductors such as Andris Nelsons, and in the Conservatoire Symphony Orchestra on 1st Horn broadcast on BBC Radio 3 under Mirga Gražinytė-Tyla. He learns with Elizabeth Randall (CoE) and Jeremy Bushell (CBSO).

Benjamin grew up in East London and learned in the Redbridge Music Service under Graham Smith, and was introduced to the Horn through a Jack Petchey award for children in underprivileged areas. He would like to thank the Jack Petchey Charity, and the Royal Philharmonic Society for their support in the past, and what they do for young musicians today.

Coming up, he looks forward to a summer tour with his Wind Quintet to Arkansas in America, where they have been invited to play at the Hot Springs Music Festival as visiting mentors and the outreach ensemble. He also looks forward to being able to run his business TYMP.co.uk, where he finds work for Talented Young Music Professionals in corporate functions, which donates back to young music education across the UK.
