

Loving Arms

I've walked through the badlands
All alone in my bed
I've suffered the silence
Of words left unsaid
And I figured hope
An impassable trail
Just the bitter chill of morning
Just a distant sun so pale

I've sailed cross an ocean
Of hard luck and lies
I've seen the horizon
Through desolate eye's
With a heart full of hurt
And a head full of fear
Till your love light came shining
On the shoreline so clear
And I was reborn

Here in your loving arms
Here is your loving arms
Here in your loving arms
Where I belong

I've lived like a stranger
Out of place and time
I've stood on the high ledge
At the edge of the line
With blood on my shoes
And fire in my brain
I've held on to your memory
Like a rider to the reins
And now I'm reborn

Here in your loving arms
Here is your loving arms
Here in your loving arms
Where I belong

Well my days have been dark and my nights have been cold to the bone
Like a bird on the wing with the promise of spring I have flown
Just looking for home

Here in your loving arms
Here is your loving arms
Here in your loving arms