Safety

There is something very special about Charles Owen. It's impossible to measure yet is so tangible. The closer you come to the heart, the more affected you become. Those words, uttered over a hundred years ago still ring true today, and the message is louder now the family has grown. The Charles Owen family includes not only those who strive to make the finest product, who help the research to develop the finest product, who advise riders about the correct fitting of the finest product, but also the wearers who trust us with their lives, pursuing the passion that is the focus of the Charles Owen family.

At Charles Owen, we are committed to safety and saving lives.

We have the largest range of helmets independently certified to three international equestrian safety standards, offering a wider range of protection in an accident. All of our safety helmets are subject to random and independent batch testing to ensure the highest level of protection is consistently met.

Our design engineers currently represent Great Britain on the European Standards of Safety and are leading members of the ASTM International (American Society of the Testing of Materials), the major equestrian safety standards body in the United States.
