The International Contemporary Ensemble presents an evening of exploring string works by members of the Iranian Female Composers Association. Ensemble musicians Josh Modney (violinist), Kyle Armbrust (violist), Wendy Richman (violist), and Michael Nicolas (cellist) will discuss each work with the composers, diving into compositional process and collaboration.

Program:

Rojin Sharafi: sandbox (2017)
Niloufar Nourbakhsh: Veiled (arranged for viola and electronics, 2019)
Homa Samiei: Fate (2019)
Interview with Anahita Abbasi and Josh Modney
Bahar Royaee: Tombstone (2017)
Rojin Sharafi: sandbox (2017)

sandbox is about playing in a small playground over and over again with specific sound materials, tools, and toys. Once you want to leave the sandbox you fall into another box. After a while you accept the loops and repetitions, they become your new reality. So you try to build your small box in the sandbox.

Niloufar Nourbakhsh: Veiled (arranged for viola and electronics, 2019)

I think it takes a lot of courage to stand up against something that everyone has accepted as normal. Personally, as an Iranian woman, I carry a lot of anger with me. The anger that comes from things I've witnessed happen to the women in my personal life, to larger scale growing up in a country that actively veils women's presence be it through a compulsory job or banning solo female singers from pursuing a professional career. I think for me, it's important to transform this anger into a collective force that is both beautiful and resilient. So Veiled is a tribute to Iranian women that made such transformations possible.

Homa Samiei: Fate (2019)

Fate is inspired by one of the poems by Ahmad Shamloo, a contemporary Iranian poet. Fate is about our destiny and predestination. Sometimes we need to accept what we have. Sometimes, we need to be content with our dissatisfaction; we should say “Yes” to our disfavor. Life is full of ups and downs, and maybe the world is not as fair as we wish…

Anahita Abbasi: Situation IV / Io E iO (2016, rev. 2017)

Dialogical Self Theory weaves two concepts, self and dialogue, together in such a way that a more profound understanding of the interconnection of self and society is achieved. Usually, the concept of self refers to something “internal,” something that takes place within the mind of the individual person, while dialogue is typically associated with something “external,” that is, processes that take place between people involved in communication.

The composite concept “dialogical self” goes beyond the self-other dichotomy by infusing the external to the internal and, in reverse, to introduce the internal into the external. As functioning as a “society of mind,” the self is populated by multiplicity of “self-positions” that have the possibility to entertain dialogical relationships with each other.

Situations are a series of pieces with a set of circumstances in which one finds oneself.

Situation IV/Io eiO, is a “Dialogical Self” of a musician with themself, a multiplicity of “self-positions,” and infusion of the external and internal dialogues in different kinds of situations.

Bahar Royaee: Tombstone (2017)

A tombstone for Simin:

...and I saw the “death,” like a child, frightened, running away from the death

(Yadollah Royaee, Seventy Tombstones)
There are sounds in the horizon. They are far, yet so close; They are known-unknown sounds: So intimate to the instrument to be known yet so reserved to be perceived by us. There are sounds in the horizon; and in the horizon of sound there is silenced noise. Tombstone is about Death as a child, who runs away from herself. It tries to deconstruct that noise with the viola’s “known-unknown” timbres, and reconstruct the horizon with repetition, embracement of the body and deployment of errors. Tombstone is made economical by its materials. In each movement, the piece develops specific timbres through repetition. The repetitions are in gestures. Repetition of accents in all three movements are there to rebuild. The repetition is not there just to repeat, but to morph and re-shape. The gesture repeats to awake the visceral sounds of the body, the instrument’s body. There is death; running away in the horizon, in the vibration, in the space; running away from itself (the known-unknown).

Rojin Sharafi
Rojin Sharafi is a sound artist and composer of acoustic, electro-acoustic, and electronic music. Her music crosses borders of different genres and keenly grabs from many musical buckets such as noise, folk, ambient, metal, and contemporary music. Her recent album Urns Waiting To Be Fed debuted in September via Zabte Sote / Opal Tapes labels and reviewed by The Quietus as “the unexpected” and “one of the most ecstatic and fiercely original hours of music.” She has performed in festivals such as SET x CTM 2018 in Tehran, Unsafe+Sounds 2018, and Hyperreality 2019 both in Vienna. In addition, her work has been presented internationally in cities like Basel, Berlin, Gent, New York City, and Washington DC. In 2019, she was invited as an artist in residence at Gouvernement in Belgium and in 2020 she will begin a new residency through Space21 and Borderline Festival in Athens and Kurdistan. She was awarded the 2018 Austrian female Composers prize at Wien Modern Festival. Rojin Sharafi is academically pursuing her masters in sound engineering and composition at the University of Music and Performing Arts in Vienna where she is delving into a deeper research in digital music performance.

Bahar has studied with Dr. Marti Epstein and Dr. Felipe Lara. She is currently pursuing a Ph.D. in composition from City University of New York where she studies with Dr. Suzanne Farrin and Dr. Jason Eckardt.

About IFCA
The Iranian Female Composers Association (IFCA) was established in 2017 by three female-identifying Iranian composers, Anahita Abbasi, Niloufar Nourbakhsh, and Aida Shirazi. IFCA’s mission is to support Iranian female composers throughout their careers and to inspire organizers and ensembles to commission female composers and engage with them for future collaborations. In 2017, Nourbakhsh started thinking of creating an association that builds a community between the first generation of active Iranian female composers, as she lacked a mentorship herself growing up in Iran. She started the work for the first concert to feature all Iranian female composers at National Sawdust and reached out to Anahita Abbasi and Aida Shirazi via social platforms. Their partnership grew and the three composers established IFCA together. IFCA currently has more than 40 composers as its members who live and work across the globe. Since 2017, IFCA’s music has been featured at numerous festivals and venues including the Direct Current festival in Washington, DC and Mostly Mozart Festival in Lincoln Center.

About International Contemporary Ensemble
The International Contemporary Ensemble is an artist collective that is transforming the way music is created and experienced. As performer, curator, and educator, the Ensemble explores how new music intersects with communities across the world. The Ensemble’s 36 members are featured as soloists, chamber musicians, commissioners, and collaborators with the foremost musical artists of our time. Works by emerging composers have anchored the Ensemble’s programming since its founding in 2001, and the group’s recordings and digital platforms highlight the many voices that weave music’s present.
