

Delegation of independent journalists from Kinshasa visit Manono

AVZ Minerals was pleased to host a visiting delegation of independent journalists from Kinshasa earlier last week to inspect progress at its Manono Lithium and Tin Project.

After a welcoming visit to the town's District Administrator's offices, the delegation visited the Manono site office, the camp construction site and core yard, and the current drilling operations at Roche Dure.

During their visit to Manono, the journalists interviewed Chief Luba, the local head of the traditional population, Abbot Moses of the Catholic Church, and other heads of the Civil Society about the positive impact the Manono Project will have on the local community.

Journalists finishing their meeting at the District Administrators Office.

Journalists at the Dathcom SA site office in Manono with AVZ's exploration geologist Papy Ilunga and Exploration Manager Mick Brown.

Journalists visiting the Manono Project's core storage library with Papy Ilunga.

Journalists meeting with the heads of the Civil Society in Manono, hosted by Abbot Moses.