NEACJS Mission Statement

The Northeastern Association of Criminal Justice Sciences is the official regional organization of the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences. It is an organization of scholars and criminal justice practitioners dedicated to improving scholarship, service, and practice in criminal justice. Benefits of membership include:

- The opportunity to build networks with criminal justice scholars and practitioners throughout the Northeast region through participation in the annual conference and other activities;
- Reduced conference registration fees;
- Access to the on-line membership directory;
- Late-breaking news on events, job opportunities, and other items of interest through our optional email list-service.

Goals and Objectives

- To promote the communication and dissemination of information of interest among members, other associations of education, and agencies of the criminal justice system.
- To develop an overall philosophy and standards of quality education in the administration of justice.
- To encourage both limited and long term planning and research in the criminal justice system.
- To establish a vehicle capable of providing technical assistance and evaluative services to agencies of the criminal justice system.

Connecticut, Delaware, District of Columbia, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Brunswick, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, Ontario, Pennsylvania, Prince Edward Island, Quebec, Rhode Island, & Vermont.

Film Screening: Why They Kill: Exploring the causes and prevention of violence through the lens of phantom communities
Giuseppe M. Fazari, Seton Hall University

Based on the critically acclaimed book by the Pulitzer Prize winning author, Richard Rhodes, Why They Kill is an award-winning documentary that explores how violent criminals develop, how violent communities are created and transformed, and how violent acts are committed and prevented. This feature documentary elucidates how this four-stage “violentization” process – the theory developed by the renowned criminologist, Lonnie H. Athens, D.Crim. – unfolds and the strategies in preventing and breaking the cycle by reshaping “phantom communities”. The film underscores and addresses the importance of the intersection among community organizations and institutions, including courts, schools, police, and families, and the need for these disparate groups to collaborate in an individual’s development. Featured on Amazon Prime, the film has also been screened in 12 different states including a live television broadcast on KTBY FOX Alaska, the World Bank, and the United States Military Academy at West Point.

Concurrent Session #3

Event 18: Jefferson

Workshop #1 (30 minutes): On campus college student perceptions of safety related to mass shooting events

Christopher Wydra, California University of Pennsylvania

Collaborating with students on original research: The rising phenomenon of mass shootings within schools in the United States has been a prevalent topic in news media and social media outlets. In response to what seems to be a rise in violence within schools, safety plans and procedures have been put in place to protect students from the seemingly inevitability of school shootings. The intent of this research is to gather data on student perceptions of school mass shootings, specifically at the collegiate level.

Workshop #2 (30 minutes): Using instruments for observing and measuring online teaching

Whitney DeCamp, Western Michigan University

Brian Horvitz, Western Michigan University

Regina Garza Mitchell, Western Michigan University

Megan Kowalske, Western Michigan University

Cherrelle Singleton, Western Michigan University

Peer/colleague observations of classrooms have become a frequent part of professional development, especially in connection with tenure/promotion and annual reviews. Although researchers and practitioners have developed validated instruments for studying traditional in-person classroom-based teaching practices, the development of analogues for the online classroom is only emerging. Given the rapidly expanding use of virtual classrooms for synchronous and asynchronous instruction in recent years, both before and during the pandemic, the use of observation instruments is likewise in greater need. This workshop provides peer-observation and self-observation instruments for online courses and guidance for their use in professional development. The process used to develop these instruments will also be discussed, including data from a sample of 250 instructors who used at least one of these instruments. This material is based upon work supported by the National Science Foundation under Grant No. 1712065.

Workshop #3 (30 minutes): Gaming with Google: Using Google slides and forms for interactive digital classroom activities

Shavonne Arthurs, Seton Hill University

Have you ever wanted to try out escape rooms or competitive adventure activities in the classroom? Have you found them to be too time consuming or overwhelming to create and execute? If so, I have a solution for you! This developmental workshop will explain how to easily use Google Sites and Google Forms to create interactive digital experiences for your students that work in both face to face and online classrooms. Handouts will be provided. Please bring technology and/or an idea of a class where you would like to incorporate this type of activity for brainstorming during the session.

Workshop #4 (30 minutes): Teaching climate change: Co-mentorship in an interdisciplinary virtual learning community

Elise DeCamp, Western Michigan University

Denise Keele, Western Michigan University

As the global community confronts the realities and injustices presented by anthropogenic (human-caused) climate change, with those least responsible most vulnerable to its direct impacts (e.g., desertification, flooding, coastal erosion, urban heat island effect, and so on). The interdisciplinary virtual faculty learning community

(V-FLC) we co-facilitated earlier this year worked to address the question of how best to structure and teach the complex, intersecting topics of climate change mitigation, adaptation, and justice, while addressing student climate anxiety. Each community member will produce a detailed climate change module or course revision plan by the end of the summer. This workshop will briefly outline the objectives, planning, and structuring of this V-FLC before providing recommendations on the following subjects: (1) the challenges and opportunities of an online modality for building community; (2) fostering co-mentorship across disciplinary silos and levels of expertise; and (3) elevating climate justice in courses addressing climate change.

NEACJS Executive Board Meeting

Keynote Speaker

Aaron J. Allen is a law enforcement officer, professor, and consultant, who values service and education to improve relationships within his community.

Aaron graduated from Chowan University in North Carolina with a Bachelor's Degree in Criminal Justice. Shortly after, he went on to earn his Master's Degree from Point Park University in Criminal Justice Administration and Management.

A native of Greensburg, Pennsylvania, Aaron attended the Pennsylvania State Police Academy in 2015. Upon graduation, he worked in the patrol unit for approximately five years. Aaron has since served as a Firearms Instructor, Field Driving Instructor, Field Training Officer, Child Car Seat Technician, School Bus Inspector, PACIC Intelligence Officer, De-Escalation Instructor, Diversity and Inclusion Instructor, Alternate Community Service Officer, and Recruitment Coordinator.

Aaron was recently promoted to Corporal and is currently serving as a Heritage Affairs Liaison Officer with the Pennsylvania State Police, Office of Community Engagement. As a Heritage Affairs Liaison Officer, Aaron works with local, state, and federal agencies where he investigates, oversees, and responds to hate crimes, bias related incidents, and any incidents that deals with racial tension throughout the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. The goal of the Pennsylvania State Police, Heritage Affairs Office, is to improve community relations and build positive relationships between law enforcement and the community.

Using real-world examples and experience, Aaron brings a unique perspective to his role as adjunct professor at Westmoreland County Community College and Saint Vincent College in the Criminal Justice Department. Aaron also teaches at the Pennsylvania Municipal Police Academy held at Robert Morris University and Indiana University of Pennsylvania.

Aaron's dedication to teaching compelled him to start his own business - Elite Tactical Firearms Training LLC. Through this venture, he teaches civilians, security teams, and active/retired law enforcement how to properly use firearms with a focus on firearm safety. He also offers consulting services and training to local and corporate organizations.

Aaron's career has been a model of service recognized with several awards and recognition at the federal, state, and local level, including an NAACP Award, Department of Justice - United States Attorney Award, and 2020 Westmoreland County Community College Distinguished Alumnus Award.

Luncheon Speaker

Amber Morningstar is the Program Director for the YWCA Northcentral Pennsylvania. At the YWCA, she operates Lycoming County's only victim service provider, as well as a homeless program for women and children suffering from disabling conditions. She has dedicated her career to bettering the lives of individuals and the system which they rely upon. She works closely with some of the most vulnerable individuals within our communities, empowering them to seek solitude and safety. Amber recognizes that to provide the best service possible to a community, you must work closely with other key stakeholders.

Amber partners with local educators, medical professionals, attorneys, courts, law enforcement, social service agencies, and more, in many different capacities. She is the member of several community task forces and teams, to include, the Lycoming County Domestic Violence Fatality Review Team, Criminal Justice Advisory Board, Domestic Violence Task Force, Sexual Assault Response Team, Multi-Disciplinary Team for Children & Youth, the Human Services and Restorative Justice Advisory Committee for Penn College, the Northcentral Pennsylvania Human Trafficking Response Team, the Pennsylvania Coalition Against Rape Standards Committee, and Lycoming County Law Enforcement Association, among others. She has leveraged millions of dollars in federal, state, and local grant funds to support programs and positively impact individuals within Lycoming County. Furthermore, she established Lycoming County's first Custody Exchange Center, providing safe custody exchanges to families so that children transitioning from one parent to the other can do so in a safe, stress-free, and peaceful environment. Finally, Amber is an adjunct professor for the Human Services and Restorative Justice program at Penn College, where she is proud to share her experiences and expertise from the field with future leaders. She attributes her success thus far to her ability to network, partner, and support other professionals, encouraging all entities to work together for the greater good.
