State Legislature:

Negro voters do not have the same representation in the state legislature as they do in the city of Jackson. Proper, this could mean, with a Negro electorate, Negro voters, a greater amount of influence from Negro voters. This is particularly significant in those under the re-registration bill, which, by state law, is required to be completed within the following three months. The re-registration bills, which are the result of the Mississippi Department of Motor Vehicles, the records of the Mississippi Secretary of State's office, are used to gather information for the field secretary for Mississippi. Voting for NAACP and the field secretary for Mississippi will be in Greenwood, the seat of the NAACP in cooperation with the NAACP's National Headquarters.

On Tuesday, March 7, the field secretary took the following position:

Schools and Universities: A conference and a roundtable discussion were conducted with the NAACP, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) to discuss the re-registration bill issue.

In the meantime, Negroes are asked to register in order to vote in the upcoming election. The re-registration bill, which is required by state law, is a significant step in ensuring that all citizens have the right to vote. The NAACP, along with other civil rights organizations, is working to ensure that all citizens are able to vote in the upcoming election.

Local Government:

The city of Jackson, like many other cities in Mississippi, has a strong presence of the NAACP in its community. The NAACP is working to protect the rights of all citizens to vote and to ensure that the voting process is fair and just. The NAACP is also involved in the re-registration campaign, which is now underway.

In the Greenwood area, a mass meeting was held on Monday, March 4, in the NAACP, NCSC, SCAC, and CORE. The NAACP was represented in Mississippi, with a strong presence in the area. The NAACP, along with other civil rights organizations, is working to ensure that all citizens are able to vote in the upcoming election.
