

Amy Watanabe is an Account Executive at Nakatomi & Associates, a communications firm that uses the power of communications and different forms of media to inspire positive change and social impact for its mission-driven clients. She is also the Associate Producer for the Mineta Legacy Project, a documentary and educational curriculum profiling the life and career of Secretary Norman Mineta.

Amy has worked with local and national non-profit organizations, and spent time in Washington, D.C., doing advocacy work with the Japanese American Citizens League and developing the political pipeline and leadership for Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders both locally and nationally as the Program Director for the Asian Pacific American Institute for Congressional Studies (APAICS).

Amy was born and raised in Los Angeles, and proud UCLA Bruin. She is the Vice-Chair for Kizuna, and serves on the executive boards for the National Japanese American Memorial Foundation and Venice-West Los Angeles JAACL chapter.
